Island N-Plant Proposed

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

A nuclear reactor plant to generate Vancouver Island's future electrical power by 1981 is recommended in the B.C. Energy Board's report released Monday.

Feelings Mixed Over Report

Prospects for a nuclear power plant on Vancouver Island brought a cool response today from Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife and enthusiasm from Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney.

Provincial Liberal leader David Anderson said he is pleased to see the energy board has said there is no need to proceed with a nuclear plant right away.

The B.C. Energy Board Monday recommended that a nuclear power plant be considered for Vancouver Island within a 50-mile radius of Duncan, which would include Nanaimo.

Lorne Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada, has urged that a nuclear plant be constructed near Nanaimo while B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum, energy board chairman, has advocated a nuclear power plant near Duncan.

Duncan Mayor Quaife said today any efforts to use nuclear power should be stalled "until we definitely know it is safe, there will be no thermal pollution and the operation would not be hazardous to the residents of Vancouver Island either through technological or mechanical difficulties."

Quaife said he agreed with the engineering adviser to the board, who urged caution on the nuclear power question.

Quaife said B.C. Hydro should look into thermal power generating stations using fossilized fuel.

"We still have thousands of tons of coal that has not been mined yet. Fossilized fuel should definitely be considered before nuclear power. With the technology we have

The energy board chose nuclear power despite objections from one of its own members and from the consulting firm that conducted the 10-volume study, rejecting a system of overhead transmission from the B.C. mainland because of hazardous mountain terrain.

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside dissented on the board's recommendation about the Vancouver Island power supply.

The board also rejected development of the Moran Dam on the Fraser River at least until 1990 — mainly because of environmental considerations.

But the report warned that dikes along the Fraser flood plains can provide only a "false sense of security" and the Moran dam may be the only real protection.

Excluding Vancouver Island, the province's future power needs should be met with a mixture of hydro and coal-burning heating plants, the report says.

Costs of the new power development are not spelled out in the report, but they are estimated at "several billion dollars" between 1978 and 1990, the period for which no plans have yet been adopted by the B.C. government.

The Energy Board report was commissioned in June, 1970, and the date on the red plastic-bound copies is Aug. 31, 1972, the day after the B.C. election. The report became something of an issue during the election campaign, with government opponents demanding its immediate release.

Premier Bennett, whose government is expected to resign imminently, released the report apparently without studying it. The energy board's chief executive, John Southworth, delivered copies in person to the government on Monday and the four copies of the board's recommendations were distributed to the media a few hours later.

The main consulting work, done by the Montreal Engineering Company Ltd., fills ten volumes and weighs 5500 a set. Three sets were delivered to the provincial secretary's office, along with the shorter report by the board itself, which wrote only 48 pages.

Board Ignores High Costs

The B.C. Energy Board's call for nuclear power for Vancouver Island was made with no study of the high costs involved, a dissenting member of the board said today.

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, former co-chairman of B.C. Hydro, said at a press conference the board refused to print his dissenting report, which backed the basic engineering study prepared for the board.

In its majority decision released Monday, the board rejected a plan for integrating Vancouver Island with mainland power by means of overhead lines along Bute Inlet, because of the risk of damage to the lines.

Keenleyside said the board's report "was so worded as to give a seriously inaccurate interpretation of the facts."

This has caused the chief consultant, J. K. Sexton, to resign from his continuing association with the board, Keenleyside added.

Keenleyside said the development of nuclear power for Vancouver Island has not been studied sufficiently to justify the board's recommendation to begin a program for nuclear power production by 1981.

"Nobody has made any study of what that would cost," he said.

He said the costs appeared to the consultants to be "so high, they didn't even study it themselves."

A nuclear plant for Vancouver Island would have to be so large, some of its power would be transmitted to the mainland, pushing the cost of nuclear power "to an undisclosed figure."

Keenleyside added that he has, besides agreement with the consultants on cost factors, two "personal" reservations about nuclear power for the island.

They are reliability and safety, he said. There is only one nuclear plant operating in a comparable fashion in Canada and although it is functioning well, this is not sufficient basis for building one here, especially when other power sources are readily available, he said.

He said the board rejected the consultant's idea of stringing transmission lines down Bute Inlet to the Campbell River area as though the consultant had "dreamed up" the idea.

The consultant, Keenleyside said, suggested an immediate Unemployment in Canada during August was 503,000 or 5.4 per cent of the labor force, up from 5.1 per cent last August, Statistics Canada reported today in Ottawa.

NEWS BRIEFS

Dispute to Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The chairman of the federal public service staff relations board, Jacob Finkelstein, has decided for establishment of a conciliation board in the dispute between postal workers and the government, leaving open the possibility of a postal strike before the Oct. 30 election.

Vallieres 'Guilty'

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Vallieres, a Quebec nationalist writer once described by a crown attorney as the leader of the Front de Liberation du Quebec, pleaded guilty Monday to three of 10 charges in connection with terrorism. The three charges to which he pleaded guilty involved counselling political kidnapping. They arose from a letter he wrote in 1968.

Contract Accepted

LABRADOR CITY, Nfld. (CP) — Members of the largest local of striking iron ore workers here voted today to accept a new contract with Iron Ore Co. of Canada Ltd. and are to return to work Wednesday.

Resistance Tough

QUANG TRI, Vietnam (AP) — South Vietnamese marines fought their way into the Quang Tri Citadel today but were encountering tough resistance. One source estimated that about 400 North Vietnamese troops were still entrenched in the 19th-century fortress whose political symbolism outweighs its military value in the battle of Quang Tri.

Sit-In Ends

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Catholic School Board effectively ended a five-day sit-in by a small group of parents in a west-end school Monday by sealing off the building. Parents had occupied the St. Jean Damascene school and established makeshift classes for their children as a protest against closure of the school and transfer of its students to other area schools.

Trawl Wires Cut

REYKJAVIK (Reuter) — An Icelandic coast guard ship cut both trawl wires of the British trawler Lucida today off Iceland's northwest coast, the coast guard announced. A spokesman said the trawler had disobeyed an order to stop fishing inside Iceland's new 50-mile limit.

Realistic 'Games'

VIENNA (Reuter) — Thousands of Soviet bloc troops swept across Czechoslovakia today in war games intended to test nuclear capabilities. The five-country exercise has been billed as one of the biggest — and probably most realistic — ever staged by forces of the Warsaw Pact.

N-DP TRIO of party leaders — Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney, left, federal chief David Lewis and B.C.'s Premier-elect Dave Barrett— stroll down a corridor in the Hotel Vancouver. Blakeney was to speak at a board of trade luncheon while Barrett and Lewis held private talks.

HEATH PROMOTES IRISH TALKS

Times News Services

Britain's Prime Minister Edward Heath today sought to persuade Northern Ireland's main Roman Catholic opposition party to join the province's Protestant leaders in political talks later this month.

Government sources said Heath would make the appeal in a meeting with leaders of Northern Ireland's Social Democratic and Labor Party at Chequers, his country retreat.

However, SDLP leader Gerry Pitt said his party would not attend the Sept. 25 talks unless the 370 men still being held in Ulster as suspected members of the Irish Republican Army are first released.

The all-party talks were called by the Heath government in hopes they will lead to a long-term political settlement in Northern Ireland.

In Belfast, troops guarded the Royal Victoria Hospital today against threatened attacks on the huge medical complex by the IRA's militant provisional wing.

The Palestinian terrorist murders at the Munich Olympics "will not change Israel's principles for peace" in the Middle East, Premier Golda Meir said today.

At the same time she denied Munich reports that the abortive rescue mission of the terrorists' hostages had been made after consultation with Israeli officials.

In Tripoli, Libya, the bodies of the five guerrillas killed in Munich were buried today as "martyrs and heroes," according to Radio Libya.

Mrs. Meir told the Knesset parliament during a debate on the Munich massacre "Arab terror will not distort our humanitarian character or our pursuit of peace."

Warren Wooing Socreds

VANCOUVER (CP) — Deril Warren, leader of British Columbia's Progressive Conservatives, said today he wants to continue as party leader and work toward a political realignment in the province to bring together the free enterprise vote behind one party.

"I just don't think this province can afford four political parties and in any way hope to maximize the expression of majority opinion or near-majority opinion to parties at the polls," he said.

"I think indeed three parties is probably too many, but certainly four."

He said he will go to Victoria for the next session of the legislature, taking in proceedings from the visitors' gallery.

Warren said Social Credit, in his mind, "is firstly over as a provincial political force. I think there will still be some squinting, but I think, in effect, it is over."

He said a party "that is dying and is not a federal party, I think, should consider what its future direction is going to be."

Israel 'Still Seeks Peace'

Times News Services

But the 74-year-old Israeli leader again criticized Arab governments, for supporting terrorist movements, exempting only Jordan which condemned the Munich slaughter.

Her assurance that Israel is still prepared to seek a peaceful solution in the Mideast came four days after Foreign Minister Abba Eban said peace efforts would be shelved until the world acts to stamp out terrorist organizations.

Mrs. Meir disclosed that Israel sent a senior security official to Munich while Arab terrorists were still holding the hostages. But the official was not consulted by West German authorities on the unsuccessful rescue plan.

Mrs. Meir kept the security man's identity secret, but it was not Defence Minister Moshe Dayan. Some press reports said Dayan flew to Germany during the Olympic crisis, but the general stayed in Israel.

Opening the Knesset debate, Mrs. Meir also disclosed: Before and during the Olympics, Israeli security experts suggested increased safety measures to Olympic and German officials. She did not say what the response was.

No Israeli "police, army or snipers," were in Munich, and no Israeli authority was asked to negotiate with the terrorists, nor to approve or disapprove the German plan of action.

Israel promised Germany it would "respond with understanding" if the terrorists were given safe conduct in exchange for the hostages.

Meanwhile, the Black September organization to which the terrorists belonged, released their will, made a few hours before the attack on the Israeli quarters in the Olympic Village.

The commandos said they did not want to kill innocent people but would "do everything" for the "sake of the persecuted."

They apologized for interrupting the Games, said they had nothing against the German people and apologized to the world's youth-taking part in the Olympics.

L.I.P. Will Stay ... If

MONTREAL (CP) — If the Liberals are returned to power in the Oct. 30 election, the federal Local Initiatives Program will be made permanent by Dec. 1, Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey said Monday.

He made the statement at a Liberal nominating convention in the Montreal riding of St. Henri.

The federal job incentive program was brought in on a temporary basis to fight unemployment last winter.

Mackasey criticized separatists in Quebec, and said they are responsible for the lower standard of living in parts of Quebec such as the St. Henri area of Montreal.

Those who would destroy Canada by causing Quebec's separation were mortgaging people's future and the future of Montreal, he told the meeting.

"Every time a large corporation moves its head office out of Quebec, jobs are lost," Mackasey said.

"Those firms aren't moving out of Canada as a whole, they're moving out of Quebec."

The Liberal member of St. Henri, Gerard Loiselle, was renominated by acclamation at the meeting.

AIR PIRATE PLEADS GUILTY

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (WP)

— Electronics technician Frederick W. Hanenman, accused of hijacking a jetliner, obtaining $303,000 ransom and then parachuting into the Central American jungle last May pleaded guilty to air piracy Monday.

Sentencing was scheduled Sept. 29. The money has not been recovered.

The external affairs department is trying to locate friends or relatives in Canada of a girl reported ill in prison in Athens. Greek authorities and Canadian Embassy officials believe her name is Mary Patricia Howard-Brown or Mary Maureen Howard-Brown.

Barrett's Cabinet List 'Almost Completed'

Premier-elect Dave Barrett is in Victoria today still waiting for that magic telephone call from Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson which will enable him to swing his NDP government into power.

Barrett told reporters he has made up his mind "almost completely" on cabinet appointments in the new government but that he would make no announcements until there is a changeover in government.

He also said he is waiting for Premier Bennett to make the first move and turn over the reins of government to his party.

Asked when he expects the changeover to come, Barrett said he does not know, but that "we are prepared."

Barrett said he would have no immediate comment on the report of the B.C. Energy Board, which was released Monday. He said he has just received a copy of the report and wants time to study it fully.

Joking with reporters, Barrett said his reaction, after attending the Russia-Team Canada hockey game Friday night in Vancouver, is that the NDP's first move in the area of nationalization would be to nationalize the entire Russian team the moment it sets foot in B.C. again.

On Monday Barrett said British Columbia will become a member of what is known at present as the Prairie Economic Council, an informal committee of the premiers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

When B.C. joins the name likely will be changed to the Western Canada Economic Council.

Barrett made the statement following a meeting with Saskatchewan premier Allan Blakeney in Vancouver.

Blakeney said Saskatchewan would be pleased to lend some of its car insurance experts to B.C.

Barrett said the B.C. car insurance plan will incorporate the best features of the Saskatchewan and Manitoba car insurance plans.

Green Belt Parkland Sought in Oak Bay

Oak Bay council will be asked to dedicate as parkland some of the municipality's green areas not yet designated as such.

The parks and recreation committee voted Monday night to recommend the dedication of Fireman's Park, Henderson Park, Lokier Park, Loon Bay, Nottingham, Oakdown and Quimper.

Gibbs Park was excluded from the list because of the probability that some of the .275 acreage might be needed in the future for road-widening.

Dedication of 4.5 acres of the Oak Bay Marina was tabled until a full report was available.

The report would determine which areas were in blacktop, landscaping or lawn.

In a report, municipal engineer-planner Geoffrey White said that land lying alongside Bowker Creek between Hampshire and Monterey is not on the list for dedication as it is too low to be built on.

White said that two municipally-owned lots at the south end of Armstrong that front the land alongside the creek were also not on the list.

Letters were received by the streets and traffic committee urging that the environment be protected in the creation of a walkway on Camas between Heron and Lincoln.

Ald. Douglas Watts, asserting that he felt strongly about public access, said the pathway should be built "with the minimum amount of damage to the environment."

Ald. Douglas McLelland agreed that there should be "minimum interference of growth."

SEA CADET PARADE SCHEDULED TONIGHT

The Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Rainbow will hold its first parade of the season 7:30 tonight at Rainbow Barracks, foot of Robert Street.

Boys between 13 and 17 years of age who are interested in joining can attend the parade or contact Capt. Peter Bray at the barracks during the next two weeks.

The corps, sponsored by the Victoria branch of the Navy League of Canada, is the oldest in Canada. It provides a program based on marine subjects that include boatwork, communications, navigation, sailing and ceremonial drill.

During the summer training period the cadets have taken part in programs at Canadian armed forces' bases, on naval ships, as well as Canadian Coast Guard vessels.

This year, one officer and 10 cadets travelled to Britain and groups of one officer and three cadets visited Belgium, the Netherlands, Sweden and West Germany.

Another group of three officers and 75 cadets visited the United States.

School Enrolment Down In Greater Victoria

Enrolment in Greater Victoria's public schools is down almost 900 from last year's total, according to preliminary figures released by the school district administration.

The figures show a school population on Sept. 6 of 30,737 students, down 884 from last year's total of 31,621.

The over-all drop is a direct result of a heavy decline in elementary school population, with the figure dropping more than 1,000 students from 18,834 last year to 17,832 this year.

Secondary school enrolment continued its steady upward climb, reaching a total this year of 12,905, 118 students greater than last year's figure of 12,787.

The school board's figures were taken on the first day of school and are subject to revision as a result of late registrations.

District spokesmen said the official totals for enrolment to be taken near the end of September, will likely be close to enrolment forecasts made by the district staff.

The largest increases in preliminary enrolment have taken place in the rapidly-growing Gordon Head area, with Cedar Hill junior secondary registering an increase of 75 students and Mount Douglas senior high increasing 72 students.

Arbutus junior high, also in the area, increased 34 students.

Only three elementary school in the district showed appreciable gains in enrolment. Fairburn elementary was up 25, James Bay up 32 and Northridge up 28.

Victoria high school showed a preliminary drop of almost 100 students, but spokesmen said this drop has been almost made up for by late registrations.

Another trend noticeable by the figures, they said, is that the large schools tend to get larger and the small schools smaller. This could be an effect, they said, of a greater variety of choice at the larger schools.

Dief Returned As PC Hopeful

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., (CP) — A chanting, sign-waving crowd of 800 persons Monday night nominated former prime minister John Diefenbaker as the Progressive Conservative candidate for Prince Albert in the Oct. 30 federal election.

However, Mr. Diefenbaker's only opponent, Saskatoon rector Bill Fair, prevented the nomination from being unanimous.

When the meeting was asked for a standing vote the crowd roared with approval, but Fair took the microphone and announced he did not consider a standing vote democratic. He said he would not allow the nomination to be unanimous.

UNEMPLOYMENT JUMP

The actual number of unemployed declined last month in all of the regions, and the actual unemployment rate declined to 4.2 per cent from 4.6 in Ontario and to 3.7 per cent from 3.8 in the Prairies.

It was the highest, however, in the other regions: Atlantic, 6.9 per cent last month, down from 7.6; Quebec 7.3, down from 7.8; and British Columbia 6.3, up from 6.

Statistics Canada said there was a drop in manufacturing employment last month, whereas it usually increases in August. Declines in service and public administration employment were about average for this time of year.

Employment in trade increased last month, though it usually declined in August.

There was a significant drop last month in the number of people in the 14-to-24 age bracket in the labor force. This is not unusual for August, as students begin dropping out of the labor force for holidays before returning to school.

Ney said B.C. can not go on damming rivers and using fossil fuels forever.

Noting that much of the objection to nuclear power has come from citizens concerned about the environment, Ney said: "I don't see how laymen are in a position to argue with the report" which is the work of experts.

"Certainly we don't want any more dams."

Now is the time for the public to be told the benefits of nuclear power generation to "calm their fears," he said.

"Strong leadership is needed now to explain the merits of nuclear power rather than allowing it to become another political hot potato."

Ney said he could not see how the public can go on saying nuclear power is "wrong" when the energy board report says it's right.

Provincial Liberal leader Anderson, who has opposed a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island as too costly a proposition, said he is pleased the energy board has recommended against transforming natural gas into electricity.

Anderson said there is a 30 per cent loss of energy in the process. When a house can be heated with natural gas it makes no sense to convert natural gas into electricity at a loss and then heat the house with electricity, he said.

Anderson said it was "just plain stupid" to have hearings into bids for a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island before the energy report was released.

"That circus (the pipeline hearings) has wasted hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Anderson said that over-all he was pleased with the energy board's recommendations although the report should have been released prior to the election so it could have been thoroughly debated at that time.

He said the board left open the possibility that a nuclear power plant might not be necessary.

Anderson said he is pleased that the report "makes the sensible suggestion that development of nuclear power be delayed until the last possible moment to take advantage of technological improvements."

Anderson said he is pleased nuclear power is being ruled out for the time being.

If the province decides nuclear power is necessary, it can make that decision three or four years before 1981 when additional power sources will be needed.

He said the province should take the decision now that it will never dam the Fraser River. He said there are better ways of controlling river floods than by constructing power dams.

Anderson also approved the energy board's stand against power development on the northern rivers like the Iskut, Skeena and Liard.

"However the board is against it for reasons of cost and I oppose it for other reasons... environmental reasons. These are all good fishing rivers."

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Terry Farmer was cautious about the prospects of a nuclear plant on the island.

Chamber is hoping to get some background information on the controversy when Gray, head of AEC, addresses a luncheon meeting of the chamber Wednesday at the Empress.

Farmer said the chamber is being cautious because there might be environmental factors the public is not fully aware of.

"On the other hand it may be that the environmental factors have been stressed more than they need to be. At the moment we just don't know."

DISSENT

detailed study of the Bute Inlet lines.

"Then if the criticism was justified, something else could be done."

But he said the board's contention that it would take months to repair a Bute Inlet line outage was "quite wrong."

While the fears about severe weather hampering the lines were "not unreasonable," there was no scientific basis for rejecting them, he said.

Keenleyside said it was not until the report was published that he learned his own objections had been omitted.

He said that a Sept. 6 meeting of the board, which "lasted some 10 minutes, decided to omit my dissenting statement, although it had previously been agreed that my reasons for making a minority report would be recorded."

He said that the board's recent contention that his statement was too long "is hard to credit."

Keenleyside said his dissenting report was supported by Sexton.

He said Sexton's resignation from the continuing relationship with the board "may prove to be the worst result of the board's action."

Now It's Israelis

KAMPALA (Reuter) — Uganda's President Idi Amin has suggested that all Israelis be moved from the Middle East to Britain, adding that he understands why Hitler liquidated six million Jews.

Amin stated his views on the Middle East crisis in a telegram to United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and to Golda Meir, Israel's prime minister.

His cable said:

"Germany is the right place where when Hitler was the prime minister chancellor and supreme commander, he burnt over six million Jews."

"This is because Hitler and all German people knew that Israelis are not people who are working in the interest of the people of the world and that is why they burnt the Israelis alive with gas in the soil of Germany."

School Board Appointments

The Greater Victoria school board will appoint two administrative assistants to take over duties at Central junior secondary at its Monday night board meeting.

The move follows transfer of Central vice-principal Robert W. H. Nixon to a teaching position at Colquitz junior secondary.

In another development, the resignation of Hector Sutherland as principal of Macaulay Elementary has been made public by the board.

Sutherland will leave the school at the end of December after spending four years as its principal.

the weather

A slow moving weather system laying across Alaska will cause cloudy skies and periods of rain over extreme northern B.C. today and Wednesday. Elsewhere pleasant late summer weather will prevail. Skies will be sunny except for local morning fog patches and afternoon temperatures will be in the sixties or low seventies.

Energy Report Pushes Coal for Generating Power

speculated upon during the report's preparation are the Fraser-Moran Dam and nuclear power.

Premier Bennett had rejected both systems, while others in his cabinet and in the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority expressed varying amounts of sympathy.

The report went beyond studying the physical power needs and also recommended changes in the lines of communication and authority between the government and B.C. Hydro. The report suggests a lack of "specific directions" given by the government on its energy policies in the past.

The board ruled out the engineering company's claim that overhead transmission lines from the B.C. interior would best serve the Island because the lines would have to be strung along mountainous Bute Inlet north of Campbell River.

"... an outage, caused by severe weather conditions could result in the lines being out of service from winter to spring, with no possibility of repair."

The two remaining alternatives are a coal-burning thermal plant, and a nuclear power plant which would be built within a 50-mile radius of the B.C. Hydro terminal station north of Duncan.

"The board considers that, for environmental and other reasons, a nuclear plant is preferable to a coal-fired plant."

The engineering study rejected nuclear power because of the state of the technology and the cost of the power — 6.5 mills per kilowatt hour. This compared poorly with the mixed hydro-thermal system recommended for the province as a whole.

The engineering study said B.C. "should first develop its economically attractive resources of hydro and conventional thermal power, and postpone its entry into the nuclear power field while taking advantage of further advances in technology."

The Fraser-Moran Dam development was rejected because of overwhelming environmental considerations and in any event, the thermal-hydro mixture development in other parts of the province can provide power at the same cost, the report says.

The board's report says it agrees with the consultant's attitude towards damming the Fraser: "... the Fraser River salmon constitute a fundamental component of British Columbia's wildlife resources."

"... any contemplated reduction in their numbers by man-made structures would imply an intangible loss difficult to evaluate, and give rise to such an emotionally charged controversy as to preclude specific scheduling of the undertaking — unless the countervailing need were equally acute in the public mind."

"Power does not present such an acute need — at least through 1990, because it can be obtained at approximately the same cost from Hat Creek coal."

Hat Creek coal is the basis of the board's recommendation to build a thermal plant as the main power supply in the 1980s to 1990 period.

The Hat Creek coal area is in hilly terrain about mid-way between Ashcroft and Lillooet. The consultant's report estimates the coal reserves at more than 340 million tons, "an unusually attractive prospect as fuel for a large thermal power development."

The board says there is more than enough hydro and thermal power potential in

B.C. to meet the demand through 1990, even though the power demand will be growing at an annual rate of at least a million kilowatts by 1985. The present growth rate is about 350,000 kilowatts a year.

The report begins in 1978 because B.C. Hydro has already planned its five-year expansion program from 1972 to 1977.

According to the consultant's recommended expansion program between 1978 and 1990, 53 new generating units and three river diversions are required, to produce close to 13,000,000 kilowatts. About 3,500 miles of new transmission lines will also need building.

Besides plugging for better lines of communication between the government and B.C. Hydro, the board recommended creating a new post of general manager at B.C. Hydro, and delegating a cabinet minister or separate body to "if necessary enforce adherence to established policies" in the energy field.

The consultant report suggested eliminating the "executive management committee" which has been a central group of B.C. Hydro directors, including Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan, Resources Minister Ray Williams, former B.C. finance minister Einar Gunderson, and B.C. Hydro Chairman Gordon Shrum.

Esquimalt Joins TV Battle

Esquimalt has joined a concerted effort by Greater Victoria's four core municipalities to block a bid for increased rates being made by Victoria Cablevision Ltd.

Aldermen approved Monday night a recommendation from Mayor Art Young to shoulder their municipality's share of the cost of a brief opposing the rate increase for presentation to public hearings of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

The opposition is being spearheaded by Victoria, whose Mayor Peter Pollen was reported by Young as estimating the cost of the brief at $5,000.

That cost would be split on the basis of relative populations according to an already-established intermunicipal cost-sharing formula, Young said.

The four core-area mayors are also bidding to have the CRTC hearings moved from Edmonton to either Victoria or Vancouver. The hearings are set for Oct. 3.

Cablevision's application is for an increase in its monthly rate from $4.50 to $5. Young told Esquimalt council such an increase is unwarranted, on the basis of Cablevision stock's rising value.

He also said the municipalities have sufficient ammunition to fight the application, but it could not be disclosed in open council "for obvious reasons."

In other business Esquimalt aldermen:

• Deferred decision on a proposal for a takeover by the Capital Region of operation of Project Recycle. Public works committee chairman Ald. Kenneth Hill praised the concept of recycling of solid wastes but pointed out the additional costs it would mean to municipalities and recommended the "wait and see" stance taken by the council.

Hill also pointed out the new provincial government might mean a revision of cost-sharing in such areas, in proposing the tabling.

• Approved a local improvement bylaw for curbing and sidewalk construction on Delwood Road, at a total cost of $4,020. Municipal Treasurer Peter Cairns said the sharing would be $2,890 paid by the 13 property-owners on the street and $1,130 by the municipality.

The bylaw was prepared and considered following a petition for the improvements signed by 11 of the 13 property-holders on the street.

• Endorsed the efforts of Victoria Member of Parliament David Groos for establishment of stringent controls on sea traffic along Canada's coasts, and instructed Mayor Young to direct a letter to that effect to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and the leaders of the NDP and Progressive Conservatives in Ottawa.

• Named Mayor Young and Ald. Art Cuthbert and Hill to sit as a Court of Revision for electors in December's municipal voting.

• Authorized signing of a contract for collection and disposal of garbage from married quarters at Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt. The engineer reported it would mean no additional cost to taxpayers. Mayor Young praised the move as an aid to reduction in services duplication.

• Approved an application for a business licence to operate a modelling studio by Mrs. Michelle Van de Ruut at 1033 Wurtele Place, as a home occupation.

• Gave permission to William Taylor, 925 Devonshire Road, to use municipal property on a vacant lot adjacent to his home for domestic garden cultivation. Taylor was giving similar permission for this year in February, and Monday night's motion by council allows him the use of the land until such time as Esquimalt requires it.

FIAT

SERVICE • PARTS • SALES

All Departments Open 8 a.m. - 8 p.m. Daily to Serve You Better!

Come and Test Drive a FIAT and win a chance on the Rome or $5.00 Contest. Draws Weekly!

Sure... some cars have a few of FIAT's standard safety features... but they don't have all of them and it's the combination that makes FIAT great.

STANDARD FRONT DISC BRAKES

Disc brakes on a FIAT 128 front wheel drive are fade free, self adjusting, much more powerful and totally more effective than drum brakes and most other disc brakes on conventional cars. Discs are employed in stopping aircraft on runways!

FRONT WHEEL DRIVE

FIAT's fantastic drive train is the secret to its incredible hi-speed stability. Cross winds, a problem with most other cars, have absolutely NO effect on the FIAT 128 at ANY speed. Front wheel drive gives superior handling on ice, snow, rain, mud and gravel. It makes the sedan handle so well that it will embarrass just about any sports car on the road, because it does everything they do — just a little bit better.

RACK AND PINION STEERING

Rack and pinion is the most responsive and accurate steering available. This is the same steering used on formula race cars that travel 230 miles per hour and you need quick steering for these speeds!

FULL INDEPENDENT SUSPENSION

This is usually found only on cars costing in excess of $6000.00. Combined with the Fiat 128 front wheel drive it gives excellent handling, superb ride (coupled with front and rear anti-sway bars that minimize body lean on corners) it is one of the best systems available at any price!

STEEL BELTED RADIAL TIRES

Standard on all Fiat 128's are an amazing tire that should be compulsory on all cars but are usually an expensive option. They put more tire tread on the road under all conditions — hard cornering, braking, in rain, snow and mud. Most cars handle up to 100% better with radials, stop quicker and get better gas mileage due to less power robbing tire distortion as with all conventional tires. Safe tire tread life averages 40,000! Incredible! Radials are standard equipment on ALL FIATS!

THE FIAT 128 WAS DESIGNED BY THE WORLD FAMOUS FERRARI ENGINEERS! THE ABOVE FEATURES ARE USED BY RACE CARS FOR SAFE, HI-SPEED OPERATION. DOESN'T IT MAKE SENSE TO HAVE THESE SAFETY FEATURES ON YOUR EVERYDAY CAR?

Two Solitudes

The strange vacuum which has replaced the hot winds of the recent general election in British Columbia has been only slightly filled by Mr. Bennett's announcement yesterday that he will not be a candidate for the Social Credit leadership at the party convention next May. Few persons had believed that he would, and there is still widespread doubt that the former premier will spend much time in the next session of the Legislature.

It is hard to envision Mr. Bennett leading an opposition group or even taking part in one, although the background information amassed over two decades of office might make him a formidable critic. He knows where the bodies are buried.

But the continued silence from both Mr. Bennett and Premier-elect Barrett is a strange one. Most defeated regimes do not continue long to hold cabinet meetings, make appointments and otherwise appear to continue governing as though nothing had happened. Perhaps Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland displayed the only recent comparable example of office-clinging. Both he and Mr. Bennett might claim, however, that a political lifetime in office cannot be terminated overnight.

Mr. Barrett has been equally reticent about making public statements before the formal leave-taking of the government occurs. Still awaited is some official indication of what we may expect in the way of early legislation to implement some of the NDP policies, and just how hard Mr. Barrett intends to press his platform promises — or threats, depending on which side of the political fence one is.

There are a number of immediate questions awaiting answers: construction projects such as the mammoth provincial office building planned for Vancouver, the promised night ferry run, the pending liquor advertising law suits, the government's attitude toward current municipal and pollution problems. These are quite apart from the deeper matters involving basic party philosophy.

Will the responsibilities of office deter Mr. Barrett from spectacular essays into socialistic policy? Will he wait for a year to let things settle and the public become acclimatized to the new political weather? How about taxes, and large-scale welfare spending?

These and many other questions are engaging the speculation of businessmen, taxpayers, financial houses and just plain people. It is not a good idea to continue in the present limbo much longer — too many facets of our provincial life are dependent on confidence and a knowledge of what lies ahead. Let's make the change and get on with it.

Extra Benefits From the Series

Despite the fact that the results of the hockey series between Canada and Russia so far have been a rude shock to the people of this country, the long-awaited series itself has been worthwhile. As the teams now prepare to continue the games in Moscow, Canada has collected two losses, a tie and one win — a far cry from the string of victories which some supporters predicted, and a situation which it may be difficult to rectify on the Soviet team's home ice.

Reasons advanced for the Canadian showing have many facets: too early in the season, too much individual play by stars, lack of physical condition, lack of team play, and so on. But it all boils down to lack of goals. The Russian players are in excellent shape and very well trained in a relentless passing game which so far the Canadians have been unable fully to match.

But at least two benefits have emerged, regardless of the results of the next four games. Canadian fans have been treated to some excellent hockey, although the games have not been uniformly good. And it has been a mind-widening experience for the nation to find that Russian athletes can be pretty good fellows who play cleanly and expertly and would be an asset to any country.

The very fact that the series has at last been held signifies a great advance in international amity. Let's hope that whichever way the final standing turns out the background of friendly sportsmanship will survive as a basis for broader understanding and future contacts.

A Different Competition

Despite the popularity of movies and books using a Mafia theme, the suggestion of an exact on the criminal organization for legitimate business might not probably get short shrift. The thought of the neapopolis management Tasca, who claims au subject, says that the minimum of bureau and fast reaction to changing cond-tions... They appear always to be growing and changing." By comparison with big businesses with schemes ten levels of authority, the Tasca, who claims au subject, says that the minimum of bureau and fast reaction to changing cond-fierce clan loyalties cemented by huge "takes" and the threat of violent death.

Were business under the gun, literally, at all times, there is no telling how efficient business could become. By definition the Mafia is the deadly enemy of social order; it thrives on and perpetuates vice. It would be impossible to recreate this kind of efficiency in the broad sunlight and still hope for a lawful society.

Social Credit

BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Fallacy of Easy Answers

After its defeat in British Columbia, Premier Lougheed of Alberta was quoted as saying that Social Credit had finally died throughout Western Canada. In an electoral sense this may well be true. In a sense more important than elections it certainly is not true. For the only significant idea in Social Credit is not only alive and healthy, but growing everywhere, in all political parties. Mr. Lougheed will live to regret his premature funeral oration.

When the late Major C. H. Douglas visited British Columbia some 40 years ago he could not have imagined that here, of all places, his wonderful new invention would bring a then-unknown man, W. A. C. Bennett, to office and 20 years of power. He could not imagine, either, that Mr. Bennett, using its label, would regard the whole Douglas theory with private contempt and substitute a theory of his own, with extraordinary results, good and bad. Yet so it turned out, until the so-called Social Credit government was succeeded by a government of so-called socialism.

credit through the banking system. In those days of unnecessary depression he was quite right about the need for more public purchasing power, and the existing governments, economists and business managers who denounced him were quite wrong, not to say crazy.

To be sure, Major Douglas was also wrong in assuming that the output of brave dream faded at last even in Alberta and British Columbia, where only the name and legend of Social Credit remained under orthodox conservative governments.

Nevertheless, the cure-all of abundant money has also remained long after Major Douglas is forgotten. It is embedded so deeply in all parties and, more importantly, in the public's subconscious mind, that the defeat of two Social Credit governments does not alter it in the least.

Who Will Question?

If anyone doubts this fact, let him consider the federal election now under way. Where is the party or leader willing to question the basis of the Douglas theory? What politician of any stature is ready to admit that perhaps unlimited money will not solve every problem after all? Who is bold enough to say that a nation cannot keep raising its production costs without raising its prices? And who will confess the final truth that no party in Canada yet knows how to tame the two-headed monster of inflation and unemployment without using direct controls which all parties indignantly reject?

Social Credit, of course, is not responsible for the monster. Parties much more powerful, and economists much more distinguished than Major Douglas, unleashed it in the first place, and Keynes, the most distinguished of them all, realized before his death why his panacea had gone wrong. It had gone wrong not because it was unsound but because no government had the courage to enforce it according to his plan — to apply the economic brakes, when necessary, instead of the accelerator.

Keynes, as a genius, understood economics, but he overestimated both the politicians and the people. In bad times the people were patient, far too patient, and heroic. In good times they demand more wealth than they produce and the politicians guarantee to deliver it. Such is the nature of the present Canadian election and if Social Credit has died as a political force its original notion — the notion of easy answers to hard questions — still flourishes, with no personal credit to Major Douglas.

goods usually exceeded the money required to buy them, since the opposite had often occurred throughout history. Besides, his neat blueprint for the management of credit and society entire was soon proved fallacious, even in his own mathematical terms.

While his Social Credit could easily be discredited by any mathematician, his demand for more money in circulation was sponsored by more respectable economists, including the famous Maynard Keynes. Starting with Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, the first clumsy Keynesian break-through, the theory that inflation could cure all human ills, without doing any harm, became the doctrine of every democratic government in the world.

Major Douglas had thus erred in detail. His plan to regulate society without any regulation was impossible. His

Forget the Myth

When three of its four governments are now socialist, at least in label, we can safely forget the myth that Western Canada stands on the right wing of politics, struggling desperately against a left-wing government at Ottawa. And when the West produced all the successful movements of radicalism — the Progressive Party, the several farmer governments, the CCF and Social Credit — there never was much in the myth anyhow. But there was, and is, a lot in Social Credit, even if it has died as a party.

Major Douglas, who seemed to me an earnest, rather smug gentleman, had solved, or so he supposed, the economic riddle of the ages by strict engineering methods. A Scottish engineer, he built on paper a Just Society before Pierre Trudeau reached high school. With slide-rule and logarithms he achieved his ultimate triumph by proving that there was never enough money, or credit, in the public's hands to buy the products of modern industry and called his great discovery the A plus B Theorem.

That fact established, he proposed the simple remedy of creating sufficient

C. L. SULZBERGER

A Purely Destructive Goal

ISTANBUL — Turkey's urban guerrillas seem to have philosophical ties with 19th century Russian nihilism. Their goal is purely destructive — to bring down the lumbering Turkish social structure.

The principal laboratory where they learn violent techniques is the Middle East. Terrorists from the three extreme branches — Turkish People's Liberation Army (T.P.L.A.), and Turkish People's Liberation Party (T.P.L.P.) — have known connections with two far-out Arab Guerrilla groups based in Lebanon and Syria.

These are the People's Front for the Liberation of Palestine (P.F.L.P.), a small but disciplined outfit which has specialized in hijacking international airliners, and its breakaway faction, the People's Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine (P.D.F.L.P.), which claims to be more Maoist than Mao.

Anagrams in Blood

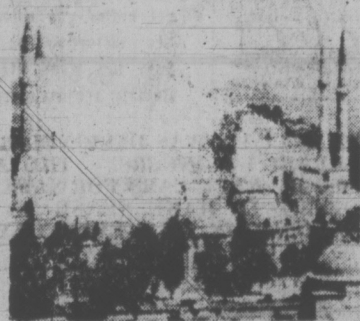

If all this sounds like some weird word game, one should not forget that the anagrams are written in blood. And, although the Turkish guerrillas probably number less than 100 activists with only 300 or 400 active sympathizers and a few thousand passive supporters, they managed to throw a deep scare into this country.

The reasons are manifold. To start with, the Turks are tough and Turkish nihilists have done some unusually nasty things: kidnapping American soldiers, British and Canadian radar technicians; murdering an Israeli consul general; burning one of Istanbul's most splendid edifices; sinking two ships. And so forth.

The apparent idea, as far as can be discerned, is to bring down the Government, prompt an open military take-over and thereby cause a public reaction sympathetic to the guerrillas. All that is an opium dreamer's Turkish delight and opium farming is now banned.

In the late 1960's revolutionary literature was allowed to appear for the first time and discontented students found it possible to study — in Turkish — such textbooks on violence as Carlos Marighella's treatise on the urban guerrilla. Leftist university scholars both here and in the large Turkish colony of workers in Germany literally accepted the technical possibilities thus offered and also, incidentally, encouraged by Bizim Radyo, a Turkish-language broadcasting station in East Germany.

A nucleus of professional terrorists was trained here and in Lebanon and Syria, and equipped with arms smuggled from the Palestine guerrillas' allies across the Bulgarian border. Last month 14 Turkish revolutionists were caught on the Syrian frontier. When they were expelled from that country, Ankara was tactfully notified.

There has been an effort to link the tiny urban guerrilla movement with the large and restless Kurdish minority in southern and eastern Turkey and committees of so-called Maoist or New Left Turkish agitators have also been established in West German cities.

Nevertheless, although Turkish students and many professors have been actively discontented for years, and although there is growing frustration at the lack of adequate jobs for new intellectuals and technicians, the nihilists seem to have been thwarted. Three T.P.L.A. leaders were hanged this year. Several T.P.L.A. and T.P.L.P. leaders have been killed in shootouts with security forces. And an effort to enlist the support of junior military officers (mainly reserve and mostly in the air force) was smashed.

Reign of Terror

The present unrest originated with a leftist body established among students less than a decade ago and called devgen or "revolutionary youth." Prior to last year's intervention by the armed forces and establishment of martial law, a reign of terror had begun to creep through Turkish cities. Some prosperous men even sent their families abroad.

But public confidence now seems to have been restored and the security forces believe the small but vigorous terrorist organizations have been decapitated. Moreover, police analysis has disclosed that the urban guerrillas here have less extensive connections abroad than had sometimes been rumored; that, for example, there is no reason to link them with the Uruguayan Tupamaros or the I.R.A.

The explosions that have been rocking Turkey seem to have been limited but the factors within the Turkish social structure that ignited these explosions have yet to be improved. The country has by no means advanced enough economically, educationally, or politically in the half century since Ataturk's revolution assumed full control.

In addition to a generation gap so immense that it prevents even the semblance of a dialogue between old and young, there is still a cultural gap which prevents even the pretension of consensus on any major national issue. Until this is bridged, nihilism of one or another sort will remain endemic.

1972 New York Times News Service.

Plumb Selfish

I always find the articles by Anthony Lewis of the New York Times to be sane and rational and his article, "The Division of America", is no exception.

His statement "the wish for success and comfort, for insulation from other's misery. Those are quite understandable desires and they have often made a political majority by combining those who aspire with those who have achieved."

I cannot think of a better way of describing the North American attitude to life and this applies not only to the U.S. but also to Canada. In other words the average person is just plumb selfish and has little thought for his fellow-being.

I cannot see where and how a basic society can be built on such a premise and without doubt this attitude is the cause of most troubles not only in the U.S. but also in Canada. It is also tragic that these same people will attend church regularly without in any way absorbing the true teachings of Christ who never taught greed, selfishness and the general attitude of the average citizen in 1972. Perhaps one should not be an idealist, but all social progress has been built on those who were idealists and thought of others. — M.P.B. Wrixon, 1680 Poplar Ave.

Canada will rue the day she admits a large number of people whose business ethics and social customs are unlikely to change, and whose presence will be a likely cause of friction.

The humane solution to this problem would be their acceptance by India and Pakistan, where their impact would not be felt, and citizens of Canada and other countries should be prepared to dip into their pockets to help those governments to receive and resettle the refugees. — Ex-Africa.

Terrorists

The Sun (London)

The very reason that such madmen still operate is that the nations of the world have gone on playing at peace while permitting bloody barbarism to wreak its abuses against civilized conduct. Every time a plane is hijacked or an airport attacked the world's response is anguished protest, but no worthwhile action. The United Nations has done effectively nothing. Meanwhile, the Soviet bloc and the Chinese go on secretly competing to arm some of these mad revolutionaries not just in the Arab world, but in Japan, Turkey and even Ireland. The only way to deal with this kind of menace is by international economic and political action against any country which harbors terrorist groups.

Against Immigrants

Most people will agree with your editorial "Response to a Human Need" (August 26). Compassion should be shown for people in trouble. Although President Amin of Uganda seems to have acted harshly against Asians in his country, just as Kenya did some while ago, it should be realized that most of them brought their problems on themselves.

Without becoming citizens of either Kenya or Uganda, many Asian families for generations used their natural trading talents to exploit and fleece a trusting native people who now feel justified in reversing the situation.

FORT WILLIAM, ONT. — The Indians of the district are in a state of panic and are keeping close to their homes, as the result of the report that a "Windigo" or cannibal Indian is abroad in the bush.

The terror is not so much of the physical harm which may result from a meeting with the man, but it is a survival of the old superstition which credits Indians with "windigo" with supernatural powers.

NOISE:

By GLADWIN HILL

Noise, long tolerated around the world as an inevitable by-product of progress, is reaching a peak of unpopularity.

Belatedly recognized as the most pervasive and most annoying, if not the most harmful, of all the pollutions, it is under new attack on many fronts.

The current debate in New York City over a proposed new anti-noise ordinance is symptomatic of the growing clamor against din — a movement now involving the United Nations, federal, state and local governments, science, industry, the legal profession and citizens.

Their common goal is to revitalize a public asset so fundamental that, ironically, it is cited in the first sentence of the U.S. constitution: "...to insure domestic tranquility..." a reference courts have held covers noise.

At stake are countless billions of dollars and possibly the mental and physical health of millions of people.

Evidences of mounting concern about noise include the following developments:

The U.N. environmental conference in June pinpointed noise as an important area for international study and control.

Congress is now processing the first comprehensive anti-noise laws in the U.S.

Court Rulings

Cities are abandoning ancient ineffectual nuisance laws on noise in favor of more enforceable scientific standards.

Courts have been handing down an increasing number of rulings granting citizens physical or monetary relief from noise.

The medical profession, long pre-occupied with the specialized problem of noise within industry, is giving more attention to the effects of noise on ordinary citizens.

Industry is giving quietness new emphasis in the design of many kinds of machines.

To date, no one has noted any marked increase in quietude. But many signs suggest a start is being made on stemming the steady ominous increase in background noise in recent decades, and that an actual rollback of the cacophony level may not be far in the offing.

At the same time, the conquest of noise gives indications of being the most intricate and difficult of all efforts against pollution.

Mental Illness

On the troublesome side are such considerations as the following:

A certain level of noise, probably to an objectionable degree, is inherent in present patterns of urban life, although these can be changed.

Enforcement of anti-noise laws is difficult because noise is intangible and so often fleeting.

Toning down of a major noise source, aircraft, is a legal mare's nest that will be years in resolving.

Although persistent noise has irritated people to the point of murder, and there is evidence it can cause mental illness, noise's long-term effects generally are inconspicuous and scientifically imprecise.

Mobilizing public opinion against noise is difficult because people have become accustomed or even addicted to it (subconsciously, for instance, equating the thud of car doors and the roar of vacuum cleaners with solidity and power).

Noise is measured in decibels, on a scale that runs, for practical purposes, from zero, the threshold of human hearing, to around 140, in the area

Through the Din, Some Curbs at Last

EXPERIMENT at University of California showed how sound from jingling car keys in bell-jar can kill mice. They were given a 20-second blast from standard electric school bell when they were about 16 days old and first able to hear. Then, five to seven days later, virtually any sound over 90 decibels produces immediate convulsions and death.

of loudness that causes pain and permanent ear damage. Each increase of 10 on the scale represents a tenfold increase in sound intensity.

Thus, while 30 decibels is approximately the quietness of a library, 60 decibels represents a thousandfold increase in noise, and is about the point where it becomes objectionable. This is roughly the equivalent of big-city traffic noise.

Ninety decibels is the U.S. federal limit for all-day exposure of factory workers. Constant exposure to more than 90 decibels can cause permanent hearing impairment.

The noise of jet planes is in the 90-to-120 decibel bracket. The volume of some rock concerts has been measured at over 130 decibels. At that level, even short-term exposure can cause ear damage.

If the noise rate continues to grow at the same rate as the last few decades, the general din will be deafening by the year 2000, experts have predicted.

The environmental protection agency's latest figures are that about one out of 20 persons has some hearing impairment, and that in about 25 per cent of these cases, the impairment is noise-associated.

Tension

Dr. Jack Westman, a University of Wisconsin medical school psychiatrist, reported at a recent scientific meeting that housewives' increasing complaints of headaches, stomach upsets and nervous tension "are related to exposure to noise." The noise, he said, brings to the surface submerged tensions and results in emotional outburst.

A recent two-year study of 124,000 persons in two communities in England disclosed a significantly higher rate of admissions, to mental institutions from the group that lived near London's Heathrow airport, with recurrent exposure to 100-decibel noise.

Dr. Lester Sontag of the Fels Research Institute at Yellow Springs, Ohio, reported in 1969 that his studies of unborn babies "justify our concern about the possibility of fetal damage from such violent sounds as sonic booms."

Apart from bodily trauma, noise's toll is extensive. The World Health Organization has reported that in the United States, excessive noise costs upward of $4 billion a year in compensation payments, accidents, inefficiency and absenteeism.

Noise's depreciation of real estate values also undoubtedly runs into the billions.

School buildings in Los Angeles and elsewhere had to be vacated because airplane and traffic noise cut down effective classroom time by as much as 30 per cent.

In Mesa Verde, Colo., Bryce Canyon, Utah, and other national parks in the West, sonic booms have damaged ancient dwellings and caused landslides.

The U.S. air force has had to pay out about $1 million in Noise of jet planes is above safety standard sonic boom damage. The noise element was a big factor in termination last year of the multibillion-dollar supersonic transport development program.

There are two kinds of environmental noise: The noise inherent in 20th-century machines, from kitchen blenders to aircraft; and entirely untoward man-made racket, from the snoring hot rod to the wild neighborhood party.

Four obvious avenues of noise abatement are available:

- Making and enforcing laws against unnecessary man-made tumult.

- Building quieter machines.

- Muffling noise, through better building construction, landscaping and use of sound-absorbers such as trees and shrubs.

- Through land-use planning, segregating unavoidable community noise sources, such as industrial and commercial activity, heavy traffic and airports, from residential and recreational areas.

Alvin Greenwalk, a Los Angeles legal expert on noise, has counted more than 12,000 community noise codes in the United States. But until lately, there has been little effective use of them.

Garden Tools

Equipment that will scientifically measure sound and record it can now be obtained for about $1,000. But catching of excessive noise-making in the act, getting conclusive evidence and prosecuting there is a task most local law enforcement agencies have despaired of.

The first comprehensive state noise legislation was enacted by New Jersey last January. The law made excessive noise a state offence, with fines up to $3,000.

In July, 1971, Chicago put into effect the most comprehensive program to curb noise of any U.S. city.

Its 3,000-word ordinance sets noise limits for a dozen categories of sources, from bulldozers to garden tools. Limits range from 94 decibels for heavy machinery down to 55 decibels as the maximum that may emanate from a residence with progressive reductions until 1980. The law carries a penalty of up to a $500 fine and a six-month jail term.

Planes Worst

The most acute single source of noise is aircraft. About one out of every 10 persons in the country lives close enough to airports to be bothered by plane noise and the number of airports and the amount of air traffic are expected to multiply in the years ahead.

Abatement of aircraft noise is a legal mine that has lawyers and public officials, as well as airport area residents, in a quandary.

The mounting concern about aircraft noise convinced Commerce it should do something about noise nationally.

In December, 1970, it created an Office of Noise Abatement and Control in the Environmental Protection Agency.

The agency issued in a preliminary report last January. The report recommended that the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) set noise limits for aircraft.

The least-used tactic to date to lessen noise has been land use planning, because most communities are locked in at least for the time being, to prelate layouts in which noise problems were not considered.

More stringent legislation is being considered by the Senate.

The chief difference in the Senate bill is that it would give the environmental protection agency comprehensive jurisdiction over aircraft noise — even though the agency has demurred at accepting this responsibility on the ground it lacks technical expertise.

Industry began sensing the public unhappiness about noise several years back, and doing something about it.

The auto makers have been trying to make cars quieter.

Inspired by European progress, American manufacturers have been designing quieter air compressors, a major racket-maker on construction projects.

Research is under way to tone down the noise of diesel trucks, whose snoring often reaches the noise level of jet planes.

Snowmobiles

"The leisure time equipment industry involving everything from snowmobiles to hedgeclippers, through the National Industrial Pollution Control Council, advanced last year a noise-reduction program for machines. Under it, equipment noise now as high as 90 decibels at a distance of 50 feet would be reduced over the next decade to a maximum of 77 decibels.

The least-used tactic to date to lessen noise has been land use planning, because most communities are locked in at least for the time being, to prelate layouts in which noise problems were not considered.

The Soviet Freeloaders

By HEDRINK SMITH

MOSCOW — Summer in the Soviet Union brings not only sun to Siberia and near-tropical heat to Moscow but a surge of convention freeloaders and expense-account boondoggling that worries the protectors of the state purse and Communist morality.

So frequent are the special summer conferences at Black Sea resorts, so pervasive the expense-account padding, and so common the practice of taking along wives, relatives, friends and even mistresses to resort hotels at state expense that the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda commented sarcastically that the time had come "to reserve a special beach area in Sochi for business travelers."

Sochi — like Miami Beach, a magnet for ordinary vacationers — is attracting increasing numbers of expense-account finaglers, but local authorities seem in no mood to crack down on the abuses, according to the paper.

$5,000 for What?

In a long article that provided a rare glimpse of expense-account practices in a state-managed economy, the paper cited the case of a company from Krasnodar in the northern Caucasus that held a three-day seminar at Sochi on the Black Sea, racked up a bill for 4,000 rubles (nearly $5,000), and left no trace of having held any actual business meetings. There were restaurant bills, a charge for a sightseeing excursion, items for a typist and a stenographer, the article said, but no seminar programs or records.

By U.S. standards, the per diem allowance paid to Soviet scholars, state officials, technicians, teachers or workers sent on out-of-town assignments is paltry.

Low-level and middle-level employees often get no more than a ruble or two for their hotelbeds (which is what most Soviet hotels charge Russians, though foreigners pay five to 10 times the price for the same rooms). And two or three rubles for meals. Allowances for higher officials, though secret, are reportedly much more comfortable.

But by Komsomolskaya Pravda's account, there are ample means for getting around the regulations by holding official banquets and celebrations or by charging off living expenses to host groups, a particularly favored tactic of entertainment troupes and construction enterprises.

The paper's correspondent cited case after case in which local organizations in such resort towns as Sochi, Pyatigorsk or Sukhumi forked out seven rubles a day for deluxe hotel rooms for visiting firemen. But the record, he said, was the 1,300 rubles paid by Sochi Construction Organization No. 2 for A. V. Manvelyan, director of the Southern Trade Construction Enterprise of Krasnodar, and a friend, which was charged to cost overruns.

Travelling orchestras and dance troupes coming to entertain ordinary tourists often pad their rolls. The 120-member opera and ballet company from Kishinev showed up at Kislovodsk and demanded space for 230 people. "Many artists arrived with their families," the article noted. "All hotel expenses were paid by the Kislovodsk Philharmonic Society."

Nor was this an isolated case. One artist with the State Variety Orchestra got paid for rooms for his wife, a Moscow doctor whom he reportedly registered as a dressmaker for the troupe, and a young woman friend, registered as a make-up girl.

Kickbacks

Some individuals, the author suggested, were not even embarrassed to discuss what is evidently a system of kickbacks in the practice of expense-account nepotism. He quoted Semson G. Inklin, director of the Sochi Philharmonic Society, as saying he was arranging "a vacation pass for one of my friends at a metallurgical sanitarium and a room at a hotel for my nephew from Kharkov and his wife."

So powerful is the "call of the south" in late spring and summer, the article explained, that the ministries and state agencies with headquarters in Moscow, 800 miles to the north, begin months ahead of time trying to arrange rooms for "conferences, seminars, symposiums, wholesale fairs, business meetings, one hard on the heels of the next."

'Good Experiences'

The workers of the State Trade Inspection Department of the Ministry of Trade in the Russian Republic spent "two wonderful weeks in May" conferring about mass consumer goods in the northern Caucasus mountain spa of Pyatigorsk. A little later, 420 people attended a pedagogical conference there, "apparently because Pyatigorsk promotes the sharing of good experiences."

Some conferences, the newspaper observed, were necessary and legitimate. But others were questionable. It cited the example of the conference on milk and dairy products organized by the Sochi Milk Enterprise for 180 out-of-town delegates.

No documents were found after the conference," Komsomolskaya Pravda noted bitterly, "except for the resolution adopted by the conference, which was printed two months before it took place."

They're Flocking and Knocking

By JOHN NICHOL

Frank Sullivan of the New Yorker magazine made many studies on the use of clichés in the English language. He even made a particular study of the turgid vernacular of politics.

Let us crib this technique, and do some eavesdropping while we wait for the election to heat up.

Let us look in upon the campaign manager, Honest John Pulkstring, as he checks out his candidate, Honest Ernest Factbender.

Q. "Well, Ernest, what are you today?"

A. "I am off and running."

Q. "Good, what for?"

A. "For the privilege of serving the people of this community."

Q. "And what kind of candidate are you?"

A. "I am young and articulate and I offer a viable alternative."

Q. "You have a family?"

A. "Yes, I have an attractive wife and 2.8 average kids."

Q. "And does your wife stand?"

A. "Yes, she stands behind me when things get tough on the hustings."

Q. "Does she love politics?"

A. "She is involved, concerned, and issue oriented."

Q. "And do you have policies?"

A. "Yes, indeed — we have an imaginative program with policies for people."

Q. "Good for you, no doubt this is because you are worried?"

A. "Right, I'm worried about the dispossessed members of this affluent society."

Q. "And therefore you practice the new politics?"

A. "I do indeed — and I believe in participatory democracy and dialogue, too."

Q. "And what if your opponent questions this?"

A. "Well, my honorable opponent is a fine man. But if necessary I will stake my reputation to refute such a dastardly lie."

Q. "How about Canada?"

A. "Simple. I believe in deux nations, one Canada, and two founding races."

Q. "So, you are bilingual?"

A. "Almost fluently. I have a working knowledge of French."

Q. "Tell me before you go — how many votes do you think you will get?"

A. "I am not going to play the numbers game."

Q. "So what will you do now?"

A. "I will set out to knock."

Q. "On what?"

A. "On every door in the riding."

Q. "Why?"

A. "Because I don't have the backing of vested interests and must carry my case to the people."

Q. "What are the volunteers doing?"

A. "They are flocking."

Q. "Oh, are they now?"

A. "Yes, they are flocking to my standard."

Q. "What if you win?"

A. "I will be humble and thankful."

Q. "And if you lose?"

A. "I will be thankful to all those who worked so hard on my behalf."

Q. "And who will have spoken?"

A. "The people will have spoken — regardless of the outcome. That's the way our democratic system works."

Activity Centre Group Referred to Region

DUNCAN — Municipal council is in favor of an activity centre in the Duncan area but referred a delegation Monday to the Regional District Board because it feels the whole Cowichan Valley should be involved.

Spokesman for the delegation Barbara Neild, who is also chairman of the steering committee, set up to investigate an activity centre, told council that the centre would essentially be focussing on providing programs for people of all ages from all segments of the community.

"We feel that there is a great deal of potential to develop creative and interesting programs which would meet the needs of people in this community with minimal expense. Essentially this could come about through greater use of existing facilities and increased use of volunteers from the community," she said.

At this stage, Mrs. Neild said, "we can see an activity centre as a place where people can meet, talk, relax, be with other people, learn a craft or two, teach a craft or two, listen to music, or just enjoy the company of others."

Mrs. Neild said one key feature about the centre would be the growth and flexibility. "We see a centre as a growing thing — growing from the ideas and needs of the people who use it."

She asked council for the use of the old public library building in downtown Duncan, to set up the centre.

Mayor Jim Quaife advised the group that the library building will be tied up until the end of November as it will be used as the returning officers' offices for the federal elections on Oct. 30.

By the time the building is vacated, Quaife said the steering committee would have had time to approach the Cowichan Valley Regional District and find out their reaction to the idea. Quaife said there are no other buildings in the city available at this time.

He promised that council would send several letters received encouraging the setting up of the centre as well as a strong endorsement from council. "This will show there is concern for an activity centre," he said. "I am committed to supporting the project but I don't see how we can do it singularly."

TRUSTEES WANT WARDS DROPPED

DUNCAN — Cowichan School District residents may be able to vote for school trustees at large in the December civic elections.

Trustees passed a resolution Monday evening requesting the provincial government to issue an order in council to do away with the present ward system and to allow trustees to be elected at large.

This would take two years to be fully instituted as five trustee positions become vacant this year while the remaining four will come up next year.

The discussion was introduced after former Ladysmith School Board chairman Dr. Gerald Philippon asked what would be done to see that Chemainus got representation on the board after the elections.

The department of education and school board promised Ladysmith School trustees that when they dissolved their school district Aug. 1 and Chemainus joined Cowichan and Ladysmith joined Nanaimo they would be able to have representation on the boards.

Cowichan School District will need an order in council regarding.

Trustees considered a reserved trustee from Chemainus to be on the board for two years and then residents will compete with other North Cowichan residents for a seat on the board the following election. They also considered creating a fourth electoral district for Chemainus.

Cowichan school board seats are now divided up into two for Duncan, four for North Cowichan and three unorganized. population is up 1,500 students ed, the election at large system "although it is a radical idea."

Board chairman Dave Bradbury said "we will be regularizing what in actual fact

Town Vote Planned

DUNCAN — Taxpayers here may be given the opportunity in the December civic elections to decide whether they want the city of Duncan to be changed to town status.

Ald. Hamish Mutter, who proposed the change at Monday's council meeting, said he can see where a "saving of five or more mills can be instituted by reverting back to a town."

A special committee, comprised of Mutter, Bob Willis and John Homer, was formed to investigate the change in the city's status as well as looking into total amalgamation with North Cowichan or annexation of North Cowichan's southend adjacent to the city.

Duncan now has a population of about 4,500 which is in the town status requirements. City status includes a population of over 5,000.

Mutter said Monday that with the several new development proposals in the air the city soon would see itself confronted with a tax increase to meet the various demands. He said since the city was incorporated in 1912 "we have remained fairly stagnant and we should be concentrating on commercial development. It would be more satisfactory financially and the only way we can save would be to revert to town."

Bullet-Riddled Wardens Found in Bush

ST. LOUIS-DE-BLANFORD, Que. (CP) — The bullet-riddled bodies of two Quebec game wardens were discovered in the bush near here Monday.

Their two revolvers were not in their holsters and a high-powered .308-calibre rifle normally mounted behind the seat of their truck was reported missing.

Police identified the dead as Mederic Cote, 62, of nearby Plessisville, and Ernest St. Pierre, 52, of this community, 45 miles southwest of Quebec City.

The bodies of the game wardens were found about 150 feet from their truck. They had been buried under leaves about 10 feet off a dirt road.

Money was scattered about their bodies and I saw what looked as if one of their pockets had been emptied," said game warden Claude Brunelle, a member of the search party that found the corpses.

Brunelle was in tears as he spoke of Cote, a 23-year veteran warden, father of 16 and eight-year-old boys and a 13-year-old girl, and St. Pierre, a 12-year veteran, who had a 23-year-old daughter.

"It was horrible, I took a look at St. Pierre and kept seeing my body in his place," Brunelle said, explaining the victim had changed shifts with him so that he could attend a wedding.

"Who knows what happened? One thing I'm sure of is it wasn't poachers. No one in their right mind is going to shoot someone because he gets caught hunting out of season," Brunelle said.

"They were shot like dogs. But why? What did they see that was so important it be kept secret by killing two persons?" asked Inspector Denis Enion, supervisor of the two dead men.

Panama Demands New Canal Pact

PANAMA (AP) — Panama's new electoral assembly called Monday for a treaty with the United States restoring Panamanian sovereignty over the Canal Zone and recommended that the government demonstrate opposition to the U.S. control of the canal by rejecting the $1.93 million annual rent.

The assembly of community representatives has no legislative powers, but its action was an expression of popular will designed to strengthen the government's hand with the United States to replace the 1903 Canal Pact.

The U.S. state department had no immediate comment.

The 1903 treaty gave the United States perpetual sovereignty and jurisdiction over the 647-square-mile zone. Talks have been going on since June, 1971, on a new treaty, but they have been suspended until after the U.S. presidential election.

Brig-Gen. Omar Torrijos, the National Guard chief who came to power four years ago, has made recovering jurisdiction over the zone his major objective.

Schools to Study Curriculum Needs

The Greater Victoria school board is going to take a close look at its priorities in school curriculum with an eye to making education more relevant for children in the schools.

A committee will likely be established by district director of instruction Dr. John Wiens to study the matter of school curriculum after the suggestion was made at the school board's education committee meeting Monday night.

Trustee Dr. Phillip Ney called for the study, saying the order in which students are learning what they learn, in school may not be the most efficient.

He said students can't afford to waste time, that they have to be competitive in a competitive age.

Ney also said more attention should be paid to giving specialized instruction to students with specialized skills.

"If the children's brains are different, we should be training them differently," he said.

Ney said the present curriculum system finds itself becoming outdated far too quickly, particularly in the sciences.

He suggested that a committee of experts be engaged to make the study, which is expected to take as long as a year.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Scientists are giving a jolt to bolts out of the blue.

They say they have been successful in field experiments in suppressing the destructive force of lightning.

The second phase of experiments to control this fearsome phenomenon recently was concluded in Colorado and produced encouraging results, they added.

Ultimately, the ability to suppress lightning would help reduce forest fires, 80 per cent of which are caused by lightning, Dr. Heinz Kasimir, project leader, said in a telephone interview Monday.

Kasimir and five colleagues from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration seeded thunderstorms with metalized nylon fibres — chaff — and succeeded in neutralizing storm electrical fields which produce lightning.

The chaff is gossamer fine

U.S. Rated on Cynicism Scale

The Washington Post The American people's trust in the U.S. government dropped nearly 20 per cent from 1964 to 1970, according to Arthur Miller, a political scientist from Ohio State, and public trust among blacks dropped at twice that rate.

That segments of the population are alienated from the government is not surprising, Miller said, but he views the rapid degree of change in only six years as "somewhat alarming."

Using data provided by the University of Michigan's survey research centre, Miller has devised a "cynicism scale" which he presented last week in a paper to the annual meeting of the American Political Science Association.

Over a six-year period a broad segment of people was questioned as to their trust in U.S. institutions and their answers were rated as to degree of alienation and cynicism.

Twenty per cent of those polled in 1964 distrusted the government but by 1970 the figure had risen to 39 per cent.

During the 1964-68 period public trust among blacks actually rose, according to the "cynicism scale," while public trust among whites began a steady decline. After 1968, blacks began to lose faith in government more rapidly than whites but prior to 1968 blacks still "demonstrated more trust in the government than whites," Miller said. By 1970 a "reversal" had occurred with 56 per cent of all blacks queried mistrusting the government, as compared to 39 per cent among whites.

A feeling of inability to influence government was a prime cause of discontent: "Those who felt they had very little impact on government were the most cynical."

million jobs have been created in little more than a year, and the Nixon administration is "on the right road" to reducing unemployment.

The Democratic vice-presidential candidate, Sargent Shriver, promised the convention of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers in Los Angeles that a union man would be named secretary of labor in a McGovern cabinet.

McGovern Plus Kennedy Equals Crowd-Pleaser

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Edward M. Kennedy has joined George McGovern on the campaign trail and together they draw the largest crowd in McGovern's post-convention presidential campaign.

More than 12,000 turned out in Minneapolis Monday night to hear Kennedy say that for voters this year, "The choice is very much the same one as in 1960" when John F. Kennedy was elected president.

Kennedy will appear with McGovern today in Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

Vice-President Spiro Agnew drew cheers from delegates to the annual convention of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers Union convention in Las Vegas when he said the Nixon administration plans to eliminate wage and price controls "as soon as we can."

Agnew also said about 2.2

McGovern earlier said he had hit "a real sore point" in his accusations of administration favoritism of big grain corporations in the U.S.-Soviet wheat deal. He said he intends to pursue the matter.

considerable effort is being made.

In other business: —It was reported that a total of 236 transfers of students from school to school at the secondary level have been approved so far this year. Forty-seven have been turned down. At the elementary level, 138 transfers have been approved, none turned down.

Elections Canada

ENUMERATION

WHAT The purpose of the enumeration is to prepare a list of the names, addresses and occupations of persons who have the right to vote at a federal election.

WHEN The numeration starts on Monday, September 11, 1972 and ends Saturday, September 16, 1972 for the federal election to be held on October 30, 1972.

HOW In an urban area, two enumerators will call at your home, ensure that you are qualified as an elector and leave you a Notice of Enumeration. If you are not at home on their first visit, they will leave a card stating when they will call back.

In a rural area, only one enumerator prepares the list of electors. He does not have to visit all the electors in his polling division, since he can obtain the information from other sources.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION For more information concerning the enumeration, consult the Guide for Electors which has recently been mailed to each household. Copies are also available at any branch of a Canadian chartered bank. If you cannot find the answer to all your questions in the Guide, contact your returning officer. His name and office phone number are listed below.

SCIENTISTS BOLT LIGHTNING HAZARD

An earlier study was conducted near Flagstaff, Ariz., in 1966-67, and further study is planned in Colorado, Kasimir said.

While no comparative statistics are available from lightning activity in past summers, Kasimir said, on every occasion during the experiment storm electrical fields were dissipated.

It is thought that 500,000 volts a metre are necessary to produce lightning.

Kasimir and his colleagues suppressed lightning by increasing the conductivity of the atmosphere with the chaff, thus making it impossible for storm electric fields to develop lightning potential.

Ordinarily, air is a poor conductor of electricity and the electrical charges of storms are not dissipated until the field builds up enough strength to penetrate the insulation barriers of the air. Then a lightning bolt occurs.

The scientists in Colorado use a propeller-driven B-26 plane. Instruments to measure electrical fields have been installed so they know where to sow the chaff.

The plane is flown toward the turbulent base of the storm and the chaff is released so that it will be born into the clouds by updrafts in the storm's circulation.

Changes in the electrical field are measured as the plane makes a return pass through the storm.

WEDNESDAY, 5:00 P.M.

The phone rang. It was Sam, Of Sam's Seafood.

"My neon sign," he moaned.

"Broken, Sam?"

"Shattered! By a giant Electric Eel!"

"I'll be there in a flash."

A Giant Eel! Could be a slippery customer.

WEDNESDAY, 5:15 P.M.

Found eel. Plugged in to Sam's flashing sign. Drunk with power. Singing "Ohm, sweet ohm!" We threw the switch.

FRIDAY, 5:00 P.M.

The eel died. Of shock. Paid Sam's claim. Because Wawanesa All-Risk Commercial Insurance can even cover neon signs. Client happy. Case closed.

Toshiba is the first name you think of in color TV.

If you're Japanese.

Toshiba was the first Japanese company to manufacture television receivers and transmission equipment. In fact, we've such a head start, that now many of our competitors buy their color television components from us. One hundred and twenty countries know us well. Why don't you?

The answer to that is that we're new to Canada. But we're making our presence felt. And our C-912B 20" portable color television is one of the ways we're doing it. It contains all the features you've been looking for — solid-state circuitry, automatic fine tuning, and a big (185 sq. in.), bright viewing area.

It also has features you're probably not looking for simply because you don't know they exist — such as Automatic Balanced Color (ABC). This is a neat little switch that automatically retains the natural flesh tones and colors you want no matter how often you change channels or the channel changes programs. A-B-C your channel and that's the way it stays until you un-ABC it. Toshiba doesn't decorate its color sets with useless or confusing gadgetry. Everything there is there for a purpose; to bring you the most automatic, most interference-free reception possible, along with the brilliance and dependability of Toshiba's own Direct Vision color picture tube. UHF/VHF tuning is easy with the lighted VHF channel indicator and the single speed UHF tuner.

Automatic degaussing eliminates magnetic interference.

Automatic Phase and frequency control brings your picture to you sharp and clear, even in remote areas.

Instant-on picture and a pre-set volume control simplifies things even more.

And all these features are brought together beautifully in a handsome, walnut-finish cabinet, styled to suit any decor.

The suggested retail price? $549.95.

The C-912B is only one of many models, both black and white and color; your Toshiba dealer will be happy to show you.

Every set is a lot of set for the money. What more could you ask?

Except perhaps a name that's a household word.

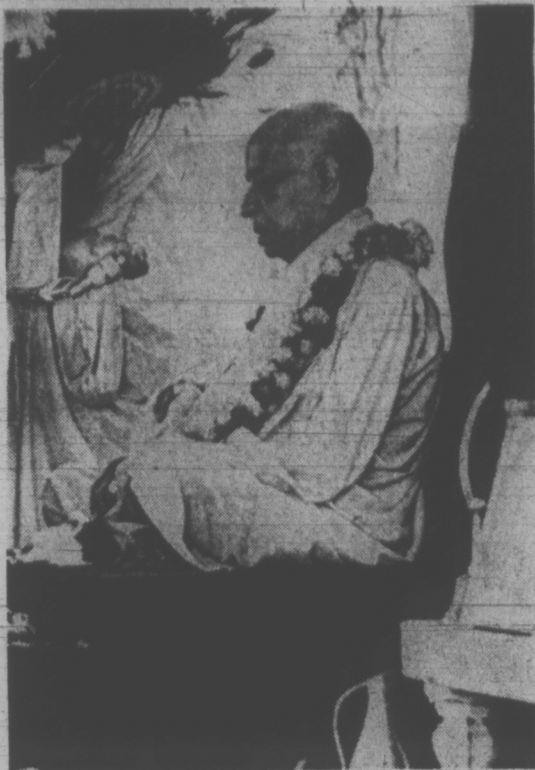

And we're working on that.

Hare Krishna Cultists Spread Word

By JON NORDHEIMER

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va. (NYT) — On the crown of a lovely green hill in the West Virginia countryside, under the aluminum roof of an open pavilion, the faithful gathered last weekend to chant the name of Lord Krishna and kneel at the feet of their spiritual master, a wrinkled brown man named A. C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada.

Hare Krishna Hare Krishna
Krishna Krishna Hare Hare;
Hare Rama Hare Rama
Rama Rama Hare Hare.

It was the opening of a seven-day festival at a communal farm celebrating the birth of Lord Krishna nearly 5,000 years ago, and the chanters were members of the Hare Krishna sect, a small ascetic band of young mendicants in flowing robes who are usually found on the streets of large North American cities.

Prabhupada (Pra-Voo-Pod), as he is called by his followers, came to the United States from India in 1965, to spread the word of Krishna, the pre-petitive god of the ancient Vedic scriptures that constitute the basis of most of the Hindu religious cults.

In the ensuing years he has shaped a hard-core group of about 1,000 devotees — the worldwide number is placed at more than 3,000 — who have renounced the material world in the hope of finding spiritual redemption at death. Consequently, the members exhibit the enthusiasm of Jesus Freaks, the abstinence of monks and the persistence of a sidewalk Salvation Army drummer.

The Hare Krishnas stalk the city streets in groups ranging from six to a dozen, thumping drums and ringing bells, chanting in the belief that the souls of the nonbelievers they pass will be elevated simply by hearing the divine name of Krishna.

The men, their heads shaved except for a top knot of hair, wear dhotis (long loincloths) of burnt orange and pale yellow. The women are dressed in saris. All wear the mark of Krishna — a daub of white clay or some other material that streaks down their forehead to a point between the eyes.

Most of the devotees are in their late teens or 20s, and share a background in the upper middle class and the drug culture. While there are those who have been lured from a temporal life of intellectual achievement and status, the majority appeared to be young people who had grown disillusioned after extensive experimentation with drugs and the hippie cult.

"Hippies are our best customers," remarked Dharmanaraj Das, a 24 year old, while awaiting the arrival of Prabhupada at the cult's 350-acre farm in the hilly wedge of West Virginia that separates Pennsylvania and Ohio. "They are frustrated because they have learned that a life of illicit sex and drugs is not the way to spiritual consciousness."

Purity of mind and body is the path of spiritual awakening, according to the cult's saintly Prabhupada, and devotees accept rigid rules of conduct that reject not only the materialism of their city-suburban background, but also the sense of gratification and free expression of the youth culture.

The Four Regulative Principles, for example, condemn "illicit sex." All sexual contact, including kissing, is considered illicit unless it is performed by married couples once a month at the optimum time for procreation. Intercourse is to be attempted only after each partner performs several hours of chanting to cleanse the mind.

The consumption of meat, fish and eggs is forbidden.

No intoxicant of any kind are allowed, and that includes coffee and tea. The final restriction is against gambling which is extended to outlaw all "mental speculation," a dictum that denies devotees the privilege of opinions, whether they be his own or those advanced by other philosophers or spiritual leaders.

"The rigidity of behavior and thought control has a purpose," observed Prajapati Das, a former social worker from Dallas.

"The regulations control activity," he explained. "The control of activity reduces tensions, freeing the senses. The heightening of the senses enlarges the mind, and leads to a greater consciousness."

The initiates are expected to turn all their worldly goods over to Prabhupada and submit to the labors he and his assistants request of them. Except for the communal farm, where about 35 members live and work, most of the devotees dwell in urban temples, chanting on the streets for donations.

By JONATHAN RANDAL

HUE, South Vietnam (WP) — A new Communist push at the height of tropical storm Elsa has all but confirmed American military sources' worst fears about the prospects for Saigon's military operations in the upcoming rainy season.

"I suspect this rainy season will be a hell of a lot more active than in the past," one American said. "Traditionally the rainy season has been a time for rest for both sides, but I just don't think it's going to happen that way this year."

Taking advantage of the bad weather, North Vietnamese troops captured an important district town in Quangbinh province — Tienphuc — some 40 miles south of Danang. Due to the weather, U.S. naval gunfire was unable to make up for the lack of tactical air support, and the territorial troops and elements of Saigon's inglorious second division deserted the district headquarters.

MAJOR LOSSES

The new reverse came on the heels of the humiliating defeat last month of other second division elements at Queson, just 10 miles to the north. Queson was won back only days before the Tienphuc attack began Sunday — at the price of considerable physical destruction, the disruption of pacification efforts and the major loss of military and civilian lives.

And with North and South Vietnamese units locked in a minor version of the Verdun bloodletting around Quangbinh city, far to the north, there are grave suspicions the enemy will concentrate on three southernmost provinces of Military Region 1 — Quangnam, Quangbinh and Quangai.

Traditionally one of the strongholds of Vietnamese resistance against the French and now Viet Cong resistance to the allies, these three provinces, in the words of one high military source, are vulnerable "because the enemy can strike where we are weakest."

"I fear we're really going to catch hell there, especially in Quangbinh," another source added. "But if the enemy is willing to pay the price he could take anything he wants below the Haivan Pass" just north of Danang in Quangnam province.

Between now and the end of the forthcoming rainy season in March, military sources expect the enemy to try to obtain as many political and military objectives as possible while further disrupting the already shaky pacification efforts.

NEW COMPLAINTS

The recent reverses south of Danang have surfaced another bout of serious, if private, American complaints about the doubtful wisdom of South Vietnamese military strategy and tactics, which are criticized as overly politically oriented.

"We should never have let them get mesmerized by taking the militarily useless citadel in Quangbinh City. We warned Saigon about the Queson situation weeks before it was attacked," one highly-placed American official complained.

"We damn well should have bitched and told Saigon they'd get no more airlifts (B-52 raids) and no more nothing until something changes. Their tactics are totally without imagination. In Quangbinh it's just generals throwing soldiers at each other."

Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, who replaced an ineffective general known as the "absentee warlord" after the springtime debacle in Quangbinh, is "fine," the American added. "But I'm not willing to put U.S. foreign policy at the mercy of a foreign general."

"After all," he said, "it's our bombs, our money, our planes, our everything," but less straightforward is expressed about the bloodbath tactics employed by the Vietnamese marine and airborne divisions on the Quangbinh front.

Those with long memories of the Vietnam war fear that these two elite outfits are being chewed up in much the same way their predecessors in Saigon's strategic reserve were decimated by the Viet Cong in the long winter of 1964-65 when the war was all but lost.

Only massive American military intervention saved the regime at that point. And no such United States help can be logically hoped for now as the American withdrawal reaches its terminal stage.

For that matter, the now confirmed departure of 37,000 South Korean troops — rumored to occur as early as December — is certain to provoke further enemy pressures.

The approaching rainy season offers only a six-month respite for the exposed marines who in July replaced the severely mauled airborne in front of Quangbinh City.

Marine casualties are running at something approaching 100 a day and as many as 300 dead a week, with losses especially serious among company commanders and experienced non-commissioned officers.

At the marines' own hospital in Saigon, wounded are now two to a bed. The 180-200 volunteer recruits coming out of basic training every week barely fill the holes.

"We've got to get in and get it over," one military source said. "Because we're bunched up and taking casualties like sitting ducks for enemy artillery."

HANOI FAVORED

The lay of the terrain favors the North Vietnamese throughout the five provinces of Military Region One, but especially in Quangbinh. The enemy controls most of the mountainous high ground and is able to shell the lowlands terrain near the coast of the South China Sea to make it impossible for armor.

But the present deadly stalemate, which has cost the enemy as many as 30,000 men killed since the offensive began Easter weekend, cannot be expected to endure beyond next spring's dry season. Unless the South Vietnamese somehow push the enemy out of the city and recapture their original fallback defensive positions along the Cau Viet River some 10 miles to the north, another Communist push south cannot be excluded.

Armchair strategists in Saigon claim that the Quangbinh situation finally has given the South Vietnamese army, admittedly ill-trained for guerrilla operations, a chance to punish the enemy in conventional warfare.

They add that Saigon better go for broke in destroying the enemy before the United States decides to scale down — and possibly cut off — its massive air and naval pounding of both North and South Vietnam.

But if the absence of enemy armor in the Quangbinh sector for more than a month indicates that the North Vietnamese have gone over from offense to defense, no marine soldier would deny the devastating effect of Hanoi's 130-mm. and 122-mm. guns and 160-mm. and 82-mm. mortars, which have rained as many as 4,000 rounds a day in their positions.

That far surpasses the punishment the North Vietnamese meted out at Dongha, Conthien and Khesanh when the American marines were manning those abandoned positions just south of the now enemy-controlled demilitarized zone.

A tough Vietnamese marine sergeant who has survived every campaign since Dienbienphu recalled the Vietnamese proverb which speaks of Quangbinh as a place where "dogs eat rock and chickens eat salt."

F-310* and the care and feeding of your automobile.

A cleaner engine is a healthier engine., F-310 one of the most important developments in automotive fuel technology in years, helps clean critical parts of dirty engines and keeps clean engines clean. If your car runs on gasoline, use Chevron gasoline, with F-310. Here's why:

Cleans P.C.V. valve.

Deposits in the Positive Crankcase Ventilation valve lead to reduced performance of your car's engine. F-310 helps keep your P.C.V. valve clean.

More power.

Intake valve deposits can cause loss of power and possibly an engine failure. F-310 helps clean intake valves with heavy deposits and helps keep them clean.

Clean carburetor

A clean carburetor means better performance, better mileage. F-310 helps clean a dirty carburetor and keeps it clean.

Cleans critical parts of dirty engines.

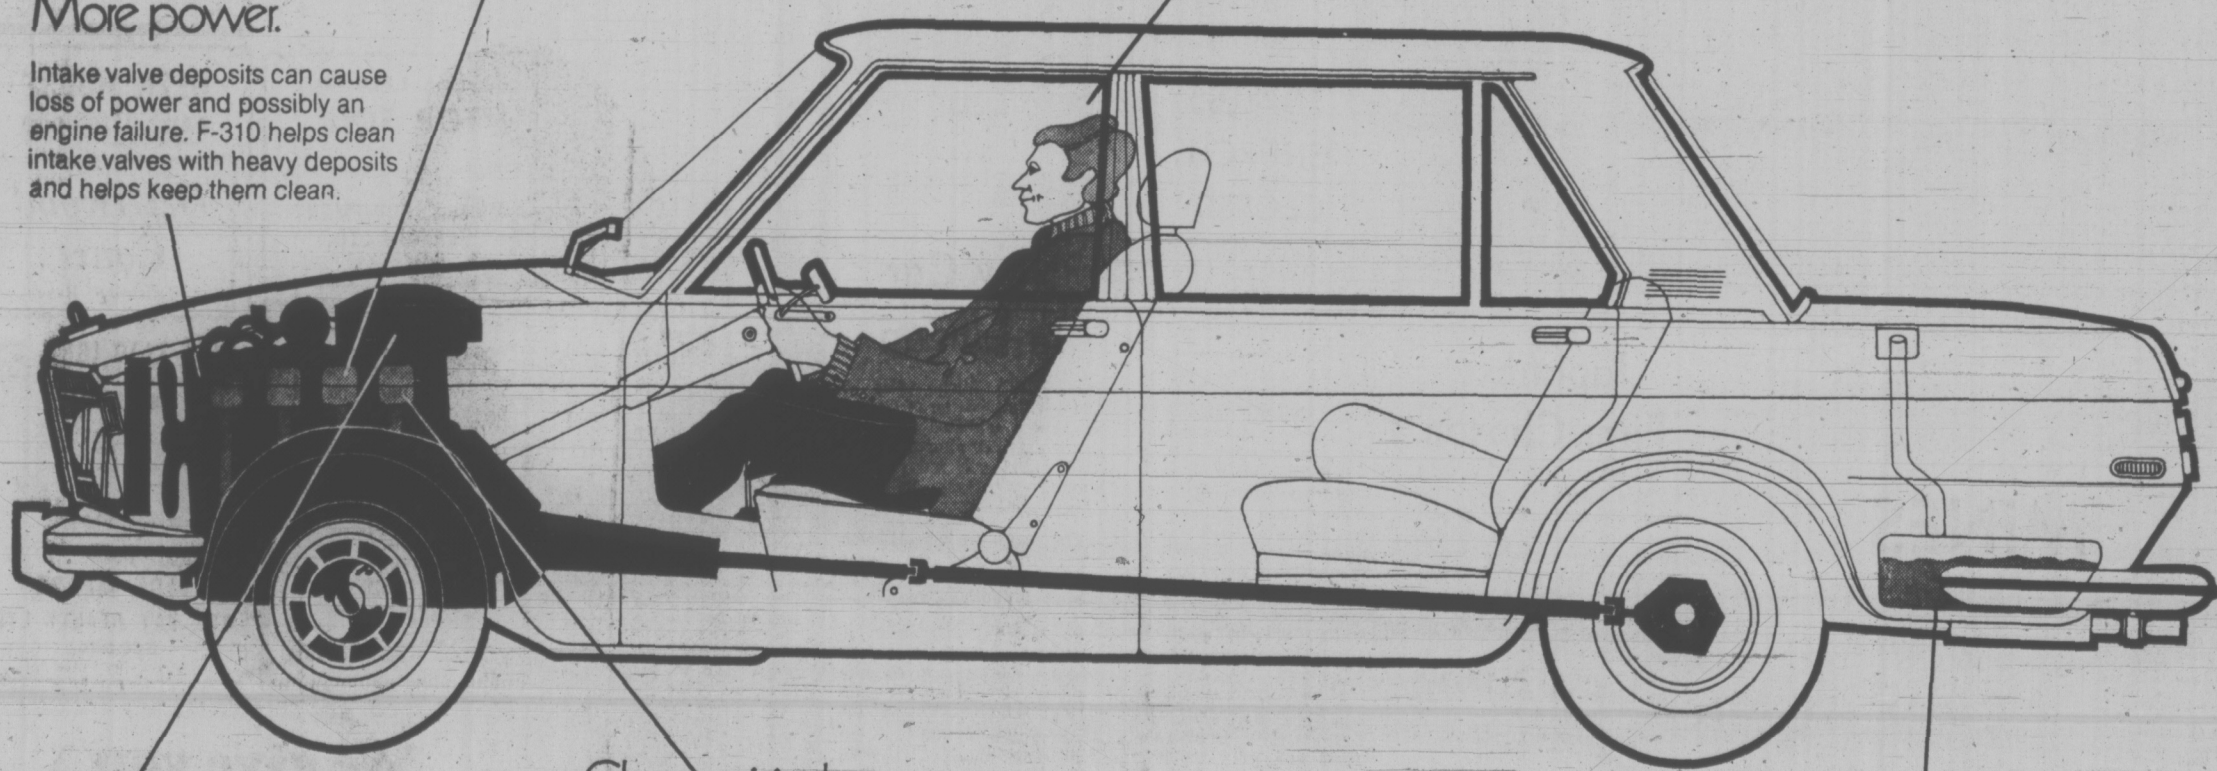

Stay ahead... improve engine efficiency, reduce maintenance costs and obtain better mileage.

Peace of mind.

Chevron gasoline with F-310 will make you a lot happier. Because you're feeding your car one of the best gasolines on the market.

Spending Pace Quickens

Investment firms report the economy at the beginning of September is showing strong tendencies.

Bongard Leslie says capital spending so far this year on long-term capital investments have totalled $12.56 billion, which is 1.1 per cent above 1971.

The pace of capital spending appears to be quickening and the company predicts a significant upturn by mid-1973 or sooner.

Odlum Brown and T. B. Read Ltd. has warned customers against any sell-off of stocks following the election victory of the New Democratic Party in British Columbia.

"Fundamental changes will undoubtedly be made to the province's fiscal and economic policies," the company says. "We would be surprised, however, if the new government announces measures which will be unduly detrimental to business as a whole."

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The company concludes: "Certainly, until the government announces the precise nature of its policies, we counsel against taking any hasty action with respect to stocks of companies located in British Columbia."

So far there has been little evidence of a sell-off of major industrial stocks following the election.

The only heavy trader was MacMillan-Bloedel which was down 1/4 to 25 1/2 on 13,000 shares traded the day after the election. Since then, however, the stock has held and is currently selling at about 25 1/2.

Other major firms expected to be affected by the NDP win, B.C. Tel and B.C. Forest Products, have reported no unusual activity following the election.

Bongard Leslie sees improvement in the world newsprint market where, in 1971, capacity (about 25.7 million tons) exceeded demand by about 3 million tons.

Demand is growing and there is no additional supply expected from the United States. Canadian mills, which were running at 83 per cent capacity in 1971, are expected to be near 88 per cent of capacity this year as the demand increases.

The higher value of the Canadian dollar compared to the U.S. is the main obstacle to full recovery for the forest industry.

Against this, the American housing boom is producing a heavy demand for Canadian lumber. Sales are expected to surpass $72 million in 1972, compared with $68.5 million last year.

Richardson Securities reports that Canadian monetary policy continues expansionary although the Bank of Canada has reduced the money supply growth rate temporarily.

The company says: "The most difficult decision that lies ahead is that concerning the removal of the interest rate limitations in the banking system."

"In order to avoid further distortions in the system, the chartered banks will have to return to more flexible lending and deposit rate structures at a fairly early date."

"In this regard the timing of the federal election (is) of considerable importance as it seems that a removal of political pressure is a prerequisite of any such move to a more flexible interest rate structure in the banking system."

Business Urged To Get Involved

CALGARY (CP) — The prospect is for more government involvement in life and business must react positively by shedding some of its defensive attitudes and trying to make government better, John B. Cronyn, senior vice-president of John Labatt Ltd. said Monday.

For the last 2 1/2 years Cronyn has been chairman of an Ontario committee on government productivity composed of business and senior civil servants.

In an address to the annual meeting of the Western Association of Broadcasters, comprising owners and managers of private radio and television stations, he said:

"Business needs to adopt a more positive attitude towards its relations with government and must bridge the government-business gap. In fact, it may well be that only those businesses that are able to do so will survive in the long run."

To cope with a vast array of government involvement, the organizational structure of many businesses and associations would have to be altered to equip them to deal more adequately

Little Quebec Town Claims Title as East's West Capital

By KATHLEEN KEATING

ST. TITE, Que. (CP) — The young gunslinger saunters casually up to the counter, digs deep into a pocket and slams his silver down.

"Give me a candy floss," he says. And he says it in French.

This week is Le Festival Western in St. Tite, when this quiet French-Canadian town of 5,000, 100 miles northwest of Montreal, plays host to a quarter-of-a-million visitors and becomes "the western capital of Eastern Canada."

When that raucous people crowd into a town the size of St. Tite, sometimes the candy floss stands on the street corners are the only eating spots a hungry six-year-old cowpoke can get near.

If he's a little older he can try for a seat in the bar at the small local hotel where a waiter estimated 1,000 cases of beer went down during last weekend. And there were still six days to go.

Boots and stetsons, and leather jackets or anything that looks like leather — are strictly "à la mode." And the more fringes the better.

The greeting heard everywhere is "Eh, cowboy, bon-jour!"

Cowboy, not to be confused with the English cowboy, is the common form of address in St. Tite during the festival, replacing monsieur and even madame and mademoiselle.

They began arriving on Friday for the opening parade and a concert by rock singer Robert Charlebois. On Saturday, the day of the Canadian weightpulling championships for draught horses, there were 45,000 "cowboys" in town. By Sunday, the day of the grand parade, the crowd had almost doubled to 87,000.

They were expected to keep coming all week, and the provincial police, their helicopter equipped with an electronic crowd-counting device, told organizers to expect a total of 300,000 visitors by the time the western horse show and rodeo wind up next weekend.

The festival is only five years old and already it has grown beyond what anybody expected or planned. In 1968, the town's businessmen's association decided to stage a western festival — just a local event. Now there is a year-round organizing committee of 45, working this year with a budget of $90,000 drawn from local sponsoring companies, the events themselves, and a $3,500 provincial government grant. The only connection St. Tite can claim to the Wild West, is a boot factory that turns out 200,000 pairs of cowboy boots annually.

MARRIED WESTERN STYLE

They went to Sunday mass sung to the rhythm of a country and western band. One young St. Tite couple was married in the local church Saturday, both wearing Old West costumes.

The intersections of the narrow streets are frantic, with riders on horses of all sizes, pony carts, chuckwagons, motorcycles and 12,000 cars.

Wagon wheels and Indian teepees decorate front lawns. Log cabins and life-size figures in calico skirts or chaps and vests portray scenery from the Old West. On one lawn, a statue of an Indian warrior holds the bloody scalp of a tied-to-the-stake victim.

School Surveys Icebergs

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Memorial University's school of engineering has mounted a combined land, sea and air study of icebergs off Newfoundland's Labrador Coast.

Dr. John Allen, Memorial's group leader of ocean engineering, said the main objective of the study is to test a way to predict the probability of a moving iceberg colliding with a fixed marine structure.

Studies are also being made of the grounding, shape, stability and water column in the vicinity of an iceberg.

Dr. Allen said the land-based contingent is responsible for tracking the movement of icebergs using radar and making visual and photographic observations.

The Bedford Institute of Oceanography in Dartmouth, N.S., has provided the Dawson, a research ship, to obtain environmental information on moving icebergs and ocean currents.

Dr. Allen said the Dawson's special cameras can photograph the above-water portion of the iceberg and her sonar can determine the sub-surface shape.

Saanich Lists Nine Voters For UBCM Meet

Up to 11 delegates will represent Saanich at the Union of B.C. Municipalities annual meeting in Vancouver starting today, nine of them entitled to vote.

For the first time since revision of the UBCM constitution all members of council are entitled to vote in sessions of the association.

In the case of Saanich, this means nine votes including Mayor Hugh Curtis, and all members of council are registered to attend. The two additional delegates are municipal administrator John Tribe and clerk Gordon Hayward, who have full rights of participation but no vote.

Saanich is carrying 10 resolutions for consideration by the meeting, including proposals for charging universities for essential services, cost-sharing with the province for employing law students as police cadets and revision of the Municipal Act to permit all property owners to vote on money bylaws.

A pre-convention meeting of UBCM executive met Monday afternoon and this morning and an informal meeting of delegates with regional government stress was to be held this afternoon.

In contrast to Saanich, Victoria has not sent forward a single resolution for discussion at this year's conference.

However, the city delegation led by Mayor Peter Polen will include all aldermen except Ald. Harold Olafson, as well as city manager Bill Hootson and city clerk Merran Walker.

Because of pressure of organizational details for Esquimalt's granting of the freedom of its municipality to the Canadian armed forces Saturday, Mayor Art Young will have to forego attending the UBCM sessions.

However, Esquimalt will be represented by Ald. Art Mota, Len Hill, E. L. de Costa, T. A. Prentice and J. S. Gourlay. Also attending will be the municipal treasurer, Peter Cairns.

Mayor Frances Elford, Ald. Shirley Dowell, Ald. Norman Pimlott and, Ald. Douglas Watts will represent Oak Bay.

Cut Out Free Rides for Non-Triers

By BRUCE LEVETT
MUNICH (CP) — Maurice Allan, chef de Mission, looked over the Canadian accomplishments at the 20th Olympic Games and said "I feel we are a couple of years late — we have to get working now."

Canada won five medals — two silver and three bronze — in the 15 days of competition.

"I can't say we're overly satisfied and I can't say we're disappointed," Allan said.

What he did emphasize is that Canada must improve in many areas before Montreal plays host to the Games four years from now.

One source for concern, he said, is that "pride in being a Canadian competitor seemed to be uneven throughout the team."

"Some really tried, others could have tried harder."

"The overall spirit was generally good, but some sports — within their own contingent — seemed to have a lot of individualists."

Allan said, without naming anyone: "There were athletes here who did not produce... Let's weed them out, those people who do well to get the trip and then fail to try their hardest once they're here."

Allan, drawing on his experience as assistant chef at Mexico City and as chef here, said possibly there's a new role for the Canadian Olympic Association to play.

"The COA may have felt in the past that we're more or less a travel agency. We don't want to feel that way any more. We want to help co-ordinate the various sports federations."

"We have tried to keep Olympic interest high. Possibly, we might take a more active role through the federations in helping with the development of the athletes. It's a situation we must analyse."

He suggested greater leadership in planning and fundraising might be a role the COA could undertake more closely with the federations.

In any event, "There should be no free ride into the 1976 Olympic Games for Canadians," despite the fact, as host nation, she will be entitled automatically to a place in every team event and in every individual competition.

"The fact that we're hosts shouldn't mean that Canadian athletes won't have to meet high standards," he said.

Canada competed in only one team event here — water polo — and made that only because a qualifying country dropped out.

Results achieved here will be analysed, the chef said, and whereas Canada has traditionally tried for "overall excellence," possibly the analyses will show "there are specific sports where we have no chance."

"We mustn't neglect these sports of course, but possibly we should expend greater energy and more money on sports showing greater potential."

The picture here was not one of complete gloom, he said, pointing to the performance of Vancouver's Bruce Robertson, who was a silver medalist in the 100-metre butterfly behind Mark Spitz, "the greatest swimmer in history."

"Jim Day made one mistake and missed a medal. Don Jackson had two bad arrows and no medal."

"Abby Hoffman didn't win a medal, but she lowered the Canadian record every time out and how can you ask for more than that, where an athlete keeps rising to the challenge?"

Glenda Reiser of Ottawa was another he singled out.

She came second in her heat in the 1,500-metre run and broke the world record, losing in the semi-final.

He termed such newcomers as Miss Reiser and Robertson "real interesting" and said: "Maybe it's time to retire some of our veteran performers who are never going to make it."

"For one thing, their spirit may not be good after repeated failures."

Within the next few months, "the sports federations in Canada must start with top programs to find the athletes with chances and develop them."

"We have fair coaching in general, but what have we produced? If we don't have the expertise we have to look outside during the next four years."

"We must move in the next few months or other countries will have swept up the good international coaches that we may need to help us. We should have the best for the next four years."

"Expose an athlete to top coaching and top competition and he must improve," Allan said.

An added incentive toward "giving our athletes the extra zip they seem to lack," should be the fact that in 1976 "we will be appearing on our own home grounds."

He said Canadians are closing the gap and that the differences between Canadian performances and winning performances are narrowing.

"There is improvement. Still, there is a long way to go. It seems we may not be tough enough in terms of desire and maybe stamina as well."

By 1976 Canadian athletes will have gone through another Commonwealth Games and a Pan-American Games and "will have had a chance to prove themselves."

There are other areas in which study is needed before 1976, he said.

For instance, Canada won't try to produce a carbon copy of the well-organized but tragic 20th Games.

"If we could have excluded this sad affair," he said in reference to the terror slaying of Israeli Olympians, "this would have been the best Games ever."

He was "sorry to see the Germans in the middle."

"They produced the best food, the best accommodation, the best of everything on a lavish scale. The hospitality was great. The Germans were trying to show how things have changed since the Hitler Olympics of 1936."

"Security was good, but not obtrusive. Eventually, they had to take stern measures."

And maybe the Olympic Village concept had become outmoded.

"It's not an Olympic Village any more — it's an Olympic city. Maybe the time has come to house the athletes not so much by countries as by sports. Maybe this would be getting closer to the Olympic ideal."

When the Canadian mission moved out of their headquarters, the members had to pass the Israeli building next door. There were wreaths and banks of flowers lying on the sidewalk outside.

The names of the Israeli athletes — some of them now dead — were still on the doorplate.

"This may turn out to be the most historic Games ever," Allan said. "Certainly, it will be remembered a long, long time."

"It's a pity it will have to be remembered that way."

The Lions: "We Start Tonight"—Dejanovich

It's been a tough year for the B.C. Lions. Ask Ben Dyck. Or Owen Dejanovich.

Ben Who? Ben Dyck. He doesn't play football, but he does sell a pre-Lion football game luncheon at the Red Lion. The food is great! But it doesn't buy. At least it didn't this week.

So, there's a problem? It could be the Lions. They haven't been selling very well lately; or winning either, and...

Well, anyway, assistant Lion coach Owen Dejanovich was the luncheon guest of honor Monday. It was his job to tell just why the Lions weren't winning, and when they would.

He endeared himself to those present immediately by saying he was glad he was in Victoria, and not in Vancouver. Because that was where his work was.

But nonetheless, he bared all, like any good coach should. Such as:

"We start tonight." (The Lions are home, to Saskatchewan.)

If the Lions are only 1 and 5, "we have a better team than our record."

If he was "offering no excuses, the Lions do have a young club. Twenty-six of the 32 players have not played more than two years of professional football."

"If we've gone into every game thinking we could win, something different has happened every time... major injuries... flukes... trick plays... you name it."

"And no I don't think we'd take Tom Wilkinson back, either."

Player Confidence May Be Lacking

Dejanovich was echoing some club policy, and not knocking anybody, but he was honest enough, too, to admit that what is lacking probably is the player confidence within the club that should be there.

"That's our problem," he said.

"A guy on the line works his heart out, the other team completes a long pass, and he says 'damn it!' Then a defensive back sees a runner coming through the line, and he thinks, 'I've got to defend against the pass, and they let these guys get through the line.' What do I do? The team says."

"It's a form of panic," Dejanovich explained. And it could come from being behind most of the time. "If we were ahead, perhaps it would be different. And they'd all pull together."

Asked to name a team leader, a la Joe Kapp, he said he couldn't. There really was no one who could rally the side. Maybe one was needed.

"We play Winnipeg even in the first quarter the other night," he explained. "They suddenly something happens, and we're behind 21-0 at the half. Then it's catch-up football we're playing."

"There's a mental breakdown," he admitted. "It's enough to break the confidence of a young player."

Of the total picture he said:

"We still strongly believe we have a good football team."

On Quarterbacks, Injuries, Fakes

He suggested that Don Moorhead, and Don Bunce, their one-two quarterback system, would yet work out, and that both were highly capable young men.

Their inexperience was against them; and, after all, the Lions were switching from being mostly a running team last year to a more diversified attack this season.

That hadn't worked for a variety of reasons.

Johnny Musso had come with fractured toes. That had reduced his effectiveness and taken away a short pass receiver. Fullback Jim Evenson had two cracked ribs, and obviously was not at his best. Monroe Eley was good, but "green"... and that in the line in every game so and so had to replace so and so... and in the defensive backfield there hadn't been one game in which the alignment was the same as in the previous game.

Then Dejanovich put some of what he had been talking about on film. And in the game against Winnipeg, strangely enough, the Lions still came out 42-7 losers.

Worse, one of those "flukes," Dejanovich had mentioned earlier, cropped up.

In spotting one play, Dejanovich commented:

"This is their fake field goal."

"It wasn't. It was the real thing."

"Faked you out," an onlooker said.

Dejanovich was quicker than the Lion defence when he replied:

"Yeah... that's been our problem."

Robinson Missing From Cat Lineup

A familiar face was missing when Victoria Cougars took to the ice earlier today for the opening of their training camp in Memorial Arena.

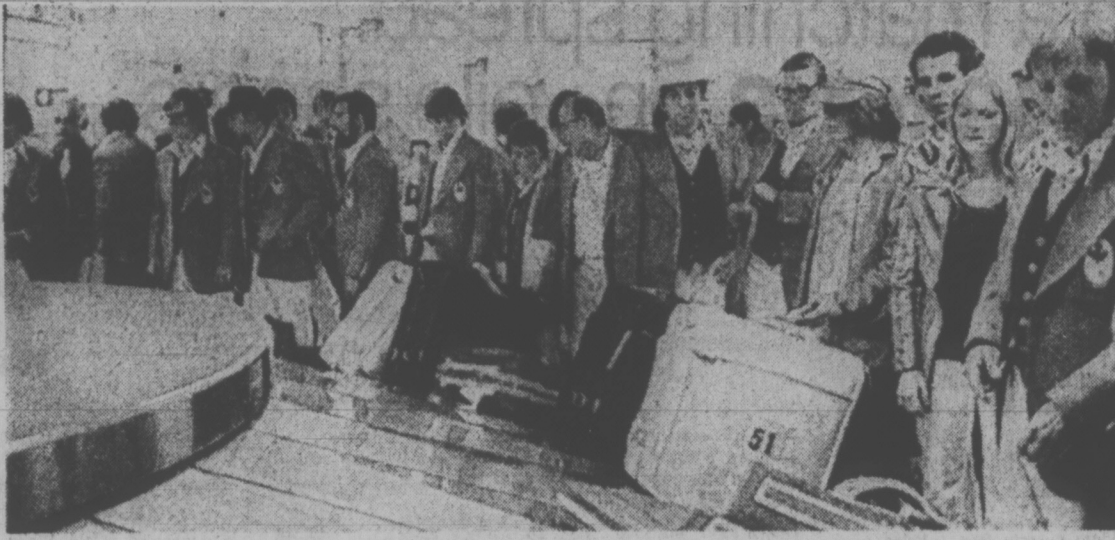

Right-winger and sometimes-centre Greg Robinson, who had been with Cougars for three years, asked to be traded on Monday and efforts are being made to place him with another Western Canada Major Junior League club.

Robinson, a 19-year-old native of Chilliwack who came to Cougars while the team was still in the B.C. Junior League, scored 16 goals and assisted on 20 others during 63 games in the inaugural WCMJHL season.

A total of 46 players, including 18 listed as wingers, began practices today.

One prime candidate for right wing has to be 19-year-old Terry Ewasluk, a six-foot-one, 205-pounder who scored 44 goals for Edmonton Movers of the Alberta Junior League last season.

Home again, Canada's athletes claim luggage at Montreal Airport.

Baseball's 'September Song' Keeps Striking Whacky Note

By The Associated Press

Baseball is going through its annual September Song, and as the days dwindle down to a precious few, the chase for the American League East pennant gets whackier and whackier.

Billy Harris Becomes Ottawa Coach

OTTAWA (CP) — Billy Harris, former player with several National Hockey League teams, signed a two-year contract Monday as coach of Ottawa Nationals of the World Hockey Association.

Harris coached the Swedish national team in 1971-72.

Houle also announced the signing of three goaltenders, including a former Pittsburgh Penguin goalie, Les Binkley, 36, of Owen Sound, Ont.

Frank Blum, a 20-year-old from Sarnia Bees of the Western Ontario Junior "B" Hockey League and 21-year-old Gilles Gratton of Oshawa Generals of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A loop were the other goalies signed by the club.

Germany Pays Compensation

BOBB (AP) — The West German government announced Monday it has granted about $1 million to relatives of the 11 Israelis killed in Munich when Arab guerrillas attacked the Israeli Olympic team.

An official announcement said the money would be delivered to the Magen David Adom, the Israeli equivalent of the Red Cross.

Dollar-a-Student Pledge for Sport

Inter-high school sports in the Greater Victoria area will live on!

At a monthly meeting of the Senior Secondary Sports Council, principals of the six schools involved pledged financial support to the extent of $1 per student from school funds to keep the program alive.

Some doubt existed at the end of the last school year after the school board slashed the extra-curricular athletics budget by 60 per cent.

The volleyball season starts Thursday, high school soccer begins Friday and the girls' field hockey season gets underway next Tuesday.

Newcomer on Defence As Lions Await Riders

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions have activated import defensive end Mike Walker for the club's Western Football Conference game with Saskatchewan Roughriders here tonight.

He replaces linebacker Carl Weathers, suffering from an ankle injury, who has been placed on the 30-day injury reserve list.

Walker, 23, a six-foot four-inch 235 pounder, was out two weeks ago by New Orleans Saints of the National Football League. He was on a five-day trial with the Lions last week.

The club also brought three more players in for five-day trials.

They are import running-back Odell Lawson, from New England Patriots, import tight-end Tom Lorenz from Minnesota Vikings and Canadian defence-back Paul Brule, recently released by Montreal Alouettes.

Lawson, six feet, two inches and 215 pounds, played for the Patriots the last two seasons. Lorenz, a graduate of Iowa State University, stands six feet, three inches and weighs 228 pounds. Brule, 27, played five seasons for Winnipeg Blue Bombers before being released in July. He was a WFC all-star with Winnipeg in 1970.

The game will not be telecast but radio coverage on CJVI (900) and CKWX (1130) will start at 8 p.m.

Last Olympics For Life Ban?

MUNICH (CP) — The 20th Olympic Games were probably the last from which athletes were barred for life because they neglected to stand at attention on the victory podium.

And no one connected with them was left with the illusion that the Olympics are nothing more than an innocent international festival of young men and women playing games.

Avery Brundage, the strong-minded American who stepped down Monday as president of the International Olympic Committee at the age of 84, possibly preserved the Games from disintegrating a week ago when he insisted that they continue despite their bloody disruption by Arab terrorists.

It was an action in perfect accord with his often-stated view that political differences have no place in the Olympics.

The Games had nearly foundered a week before when he tried to apply the same principle in dealing with an African threat of a boycott if Rhodesia was allowed to participate.

RHODESIA BARRED

To his chagrin, Brundage lost that battle as his colleagues found a technicality under which to keep out the Rhodesians and the Africans stayed. For better or worse, the outside world had moved into the Olympic Village.

Brundage continued to resist. Village facilities were denied to Olga Connolly, the 1956 silver medalist in the discus, when she tried to circulate a petition calling on President Nixon to stop bombing North Vietnam. The athletes, said Mrs. Connolly, were being treated like children.

While relatively few appeared to resent being denied the opportunity to enlist in her case, there was widespread anger at the IOC's drastic punishment of two black United States runners who slouched and chatted on the podium during the victory ceremony after their race.

SPECTATORS BOO

The German crowd, accustomed to seeing the visitors standing rigidly at attention while their national anthem was played, booed Vince Matthews and Wayne Collett. They booed again when Collett gave a black power salute as he left the stadium.

For years earlier, Tommie Smith and John Carlos had worn black gloves and black stockings on the stand when they received their medals for 200 metres and had made it clear that they were engaging in a political demonstration.

They too had been sent home, but the action was taken by U.S. team officials.

But Matthews and Collett denied any political motives. Matthews said that the salute was a common form of greeting and that the athletes had intended no disrespect. American officials interceded for them with the IOC but the ban stuck.

CHIDED BY OWENS

"I think everyone is over-reacting," said Jesse Owens, the old American sprinter who had his own experience of political pressures when he raced to victory in front of Adolf Hitler in the Berlin Olympics of 1936.

Brundage's successor, Lord Killanin, is an easy-going Irish peer who said modifications of Olympic standards probably will occur before everyone reassembles in Montreal in 1976.

Basford Sees Harbor Boom

VANCOUVER (CP) — A major announcement relating to the harbor development of New Westminster and the Port of Vancouver is expected to be made within the next two weeks, Ron Basford, urban affairs minister, said today.

Basford, Liberal candidate in Vancouver Centre, said the new developments will put Vancouver in the forefront of transportation facilities in the west coast of North America.

He gave no details about the nature of the development.

Practical Education Advanced

EDMONTON (CP) — Night school at the Northern Alberta Institute of Technology no longer is just a place to finish high school courses.

"We respond to public needs quite readily," says A. V. Machinski, assistant director of the continuing education division.

A flip through the school's catalogue shows how diverse are the needs.

Courses range from a football appreciation clinic where you can find out everything you always wanted to know about the quarterback rollout to do-it-yourself lessons in fixing a 10-speed bicycle.

A small business management course will help the prospective businessman overcome the pitfalls that caused 3,000 businesses to fail in Alberta last year. Women who don't know the difference between distributor caps and spark plugs will be able to enrol in a car operators' general knowledge course limited to women.

Many of the continuing education courses are suggested by industry, government and community leaders. And if a person wants a specialist course not listed in the catalogue, school officials will try to design the course and find a teacher.

With provincial government subsidies, courses run about 30 hours for $20, depending on materials required for instruction.

Hip, Hip, Hooray For Hippo Meat

LEICESTER, England (UPI) — Tired of that T-bone? Can't stand veal cutlets and unwilling to look another pork in the chops? Despair not, says Dr. Magnus Pyke, there's always hippo meat.

No gimmicky product name, that, but the real thing.

The British nutritionist told a medical meeting Friday. Hippo is short for Hippopotamus, "and that's exactly what I mean."

"Of course, we wince now at the thought. But that is mere habit," he said. "In truth, the meat of the hippo is rich in protein. Now that these animals are becoming pests in Africa the solution is clear: Put them on the dinner table."

Pyke said "excessive" slaughter of lions has upset Africa's ecological balance. Hippos are breeding too fast. "They wander on to farms and trample crops with those big, flat feet. Nobody can decide what to do about them."

"There could come a day when hippo — or at least hippo meat protein mixed with soya — could take the place of our more familiar but increasingly expensive meats," the nutritionist said.

C of C's Farmer Urges Curbs

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Terry Farmer leaves for Ottawa Wednesday in an attempt to persuade the national chamber convention to favor temporary controls on wages and prices in Canada.

"It looks like it will be a very difficult task," Farmer said today.

"The national chamber's stand seems to be that there should only be controls on wages and prices in a time of crisis."

"Our feeling is that there is a crisis now, particularly for people on fixed incomes."

The Victoria resolution urges the national chamber to favor a temporary freeze on wages, salaries and prices in Canada to permit a cooling off period to assist the federal government to bring inflation under control.

Victoria may be more concerned about this problem than other cities because of the high percentage of people here on fixed incomes.

Farmer will be presenting the Victoria resolution to the national convention next Monday morning.

Also attending the convention from Victoria will be chamber manager Brian Small and P. D. P. Holmes, a director of the B.C. chamber.

Society Chairman On Tour

Miss Elizabeth Owen, a deputy chairman of the Royal Commonwealth Society, will visit Victoria and Vancouver from Sept. 22 to 27 as part of a tour of Canadian branches of the society.

Starting off in Halifax, she will visit Montreal and Winnipeg before arriving on the west coast. From here she will travel to Toronto and Ottawa.

Miss Owen, currently chairman of the public affairs committee, has worked with the RCS in various capacities for the past 14 years.

Doe Checks TV Shows

CALGARY (CP) — Even real-life medical officials watch doctor shows on television.

William Cochrane, dean of the University of Calgary's medical school, has watched both Marcus Welby and Medical Centre.

"Marcus Welby does emphasize the family physician, which I think is important, but it makes him out to be a saint."

"We are not saints and we are not always right."

On Medical Centre, Dr. Cochrane said the leading doctor sticks his stethoscope into too many specializations. However, the show is interesting and educational, said Dr. Cochrane. He said there's a "pretty good theme running through it."

Jack Davis Re-Nominated

WEST VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis was unanimously nominated Monday night in Capilano riding to contest the seat for the Liberal party for the fifth straight time in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Mr. Davis, 56, Canada's first minister charged with forming the department, told more than 100 riding association members that if elected he would continue his fight against pollution on all fronts.

ANN-MARGRET HURT IN FALL

STATELINE, Nev. (UPI) — Entertainer Ann-Margret suffered extensive injuries, including a broken jaw, early today when she fell 30 feet from a platform during a show at the Sahara-Tahoe Hotel.

The singer-dancer was rushed to Barton Memorial Hospital where X-rays showed she also sustained five fractures of the face and a broken left arm, according to Paul Block, a spokesman for her public relations firm.

The curtain was drawn when the performer fell from the platform, used to bring her to stage level as she made her entrance wearing a silver cape with a fur trim.

Block said the audience was aware something had happened, although they were unable to see the accident.

One member of the audience said he heard someone shout backstage: "My god, she fell. Is there a doctor in the house?"

Ron Erickson, an executive of the hotel, said Ann-Margret was "responsive and conscious" shortly after the fall, which occurred during her midnight performance.

Ann-Margret, star of several motion pictures, was performing in a Mardi Gras sequence when she fell.

A spokesman for the show said Ann-Margret, married to actor Roger Smith, will be unable to continue her two-day shows at the Sahara-Tahoe. The shows were scheduled to end next weekend.

Folk Gospel Fills Church

Folk gospel music will fill the First Free Methodist Church when The Calling, a musical group from Seattle Pacific College, performs there Tuesday, Sept. 12, at 7:30 p.m.

The five-member group has recently completed a concert tour of churches, banquets and service organizations in Montana, Washington, Idaho and western Canada. It is one of several action teams which travels in a student volunteer Christian ministries program.

Ballet Horizons Coming

Ballet Horizons, the Vancouver-based professional dance company that conducted a six-week summer school here July 15 to Aug. 26, will present its second anniversary performance Sept. 16 at McPherson Playhouse.

The program includes Les Sylphides, Don Q Pas de Deux, Faune, Eloise and Magic Pan (two new ballets by Anne Ditchburne).

The dancers were students at the summer school, held in Bebe Eversfield's studio under the company's artistic director, Morley Wiseman, and special guest teacher Una Kai, a founding member of the New York City Ballet.

The school's curriculum included classes in classical ballet, pointe, pas de deux and repertoire, and a special jazz class from Bryant McGivern.

A total of 47 students attended the school which received financial assistance from the B.C. Cultural Fund. Nine pupils participated through dance scholarships.

Dance teachers in the Victoria area observed the classes and have contributed their efforts to organizing the upcoming performance.

Victoria girls performing in the ballet will be Vicki Chapman, Pam Ferguson, Linda Gammie, Leslie Howe, Maura Hall and Annette Ullrich.

Maritimes Tackle Transport Problems

WATER GIVEN 'SLIP'

By MARK FREDERSEN
CAMPBELL, N.B. (CP) — The three Maritime premiers broke new ground in efforts to resolve regional transportation problems during the meeting of the Council of Maritime Premiers which ended Monday.

Studies of several new areas where cooperation between the provinces might be beneficial were also listed, including marketing of Maritime products, regulation of financial institutions and co-operatives, and efforts to bring down the high cost of building a home in the region.

Premiers Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick, Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia and Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island held the three-day meeting at the Roosevelt-Campobello International Park, summer home of the late U.S. president Franklin D. Roosevelt. The premiers continued their attack on transportation problems by announcing the formation of a Maritime provinces transportation committee to identify the region's transportation goals and make recommendations to the premiers during their next meeting in December.

The committee will be composed of the directors of transportation units in the industrial promotion agencies of each province.

SUPPORT CONTINUES

The council also resolved to continue financial support of the Atlantic provinces transportation commission, a body formed by the premiers' council at earlier meetings. The treasury board ministers from the three provinces will form the committee, which will be responsible to budgeting the programs and agencies which come under the umbrella of the premiers' council.

One of the first of the agencies, the Maritime research management service, based at Amherst, N.S., will be taken over by the council from the department of regional economic expansion Oct. 1. The agency will provide technical and engineering service throughout the region.

The premiers approved personnel policies which are designed to give employees of the council and its agencies the benefits enjoyed by civil servants in the three provinces.

During a news conference at the conclusion of the meeting, the premiers' emphasis was placed on the continuing effort to integrate services rather than full political union as recommended by the Maritime union study report of 1970.

Premier Hatfield said it was quite obvious there has been no agreement to form a political union and efforts to integrate services where efficiency will result will continue.

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — A new chemical agent developed by a Cornell University chemical engineer may bring greater efficiency to firefighting, the oil industry and waste treatment plants.

The new agent, which in effect lubricates water, is a polysaccharide, a chemical substance similar to starch or the protein which is used in jelly making.

Robert K. Finn, professor of chemical engineering at the school, said the source of the yet unnamed polysaccharide is a new bacterium isolated from soil on the Cornell campus by Alex L. Tannahill, a technical associate staff member.

Finn explained that in low concentrations the agent reduces the friction of water, and acts as a thickening agent in higher concentrations.

By lessening friction on the walls of pipes and hoses, the new agent enables higher flow rates — a fact which could make it useful to the firefighting effort. It would, Finn said, enable water to be pumped farther and at higher elevations than now is possible.

Forces Labelled Freeman

James Bryant, a former Esquimalt municipal councillor and long-time resident of the municipality, was appointed honorary chief constable for the area's diamond jubilee ceremonies this weekend.

A highlight of the two days, marking 75 years of incorporation for the municipality, will be the granting of Freeman status to the Canadian Armed Forces, and Bryant's chief responsibility during celebrations Saturday will be the challenging of an honor guard from Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt.

Bryant served 16 years as municipal councillor, to December of 1966 when he was defeated at the polls.

The swearing of Canadian Forces as Freeman of Esquimalt is to take place at 2 p.m. Saturday in Memorial Park. Honor guards will represent the land and sea elements of the forces and the air element will be included with a flypast to take place immediately before the ceremony.

Rear Admiral William Leir, commander of CFB Esquimalt, will represent the forces in the ceremony to be conducted by Mayor Art Young.

Part of the program will be the granting of permission for the guards to exercise their new right to march through the municipality with bayonets fixed and colors flying.

On Sunday Lieutenant Governor John Nicholson is to unveil a plaque at Saxe Point Park, the municipality's diamond jubilee project, at 2 p.m.

Two couples, Mr. and Mrs. N. Le Gallais and Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Strawn, both marking diamond wedding anniversaries, will have trees planted in the park in their honor.

Diamond jubilee medals are to be presented at a public reception at the municipal sports centre, beginning at 2:30 p.m. Sunday. Approximately 40 medals, to area pioneers, are to be presented.

Students Seize Police

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — About 100 students seized a town police chief and 10 of his men and forced them to march back and forth in the main square of Tlaxcala near here Sunday, police said Monday.

The students were protesting against an alleged beating of one of their colleagues by police.

New House Financing Rules Fine for Upper Classes

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Revisions to National Housing Act financing regulations are being viewed as beneficial to families wanting to buy a house, but may not be as helpful to lower income families as to the upper middle class.

The amendments were announced Monday in Ottawa. For new single-family homes, the maximum mortgage loan goes from $25,000 to $30,000 and to a straight 95 per cent of appraised value.

For existing homes, the maximum mortgage loan goes from the present $18,000 to $23,000.

The effect, says Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., is that down payments will be reduced for people wishing to buy new or existing homes.

But CMHC's assistant manager in Victoria, Michael Young, believes that lower income families will not be helped much, at least as far as new homes are concerned.

Asked to comment on the effect the NHA changes will have on lower income families, Young said:

"I can't say too much about it other than that it is obviously not going to help lower income people very much.

"They just can't afford the payments on a $25,000 mortgage, let alone a $30,000 one," he said.

A family with an annual income of $7,000, he said, can usually afford nothing more than a $15,000 or $16,000 mortgage because of the payments involved.

"And $15,000 or $16,000 is a helluva long way from $30,000."

Young said companies dealing in mortgages can expect increased business as a result of the changes. CMHC, he said, which does not loan money directly but assures loans, will be busier with appraisals and adjustments.

"We're sure the changes will be a help to people," Young said. "But I don't think they will be the cure to any great social ills or anything."

B. J. Leduc, manager of M. P. Teller Securities Ltd.,

said the probable effect of the NHA changes is that the market value of homes will go up.

He said that of the $5,000 increase in maximum mortgage loans, as much as $1,000 or $1,200 will be eaten up by home price increases.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see the vendor seeking another $1,000 on top of the price he's asking now," Leduc said.

But he said the changes will make it easier for low and middle income families to purchase their own homes. "If you're looking at an average price of, say, $27,000 for a home, the old limit of $18,000 left too much of a down payment," he said. "This will help some of them."

Jack Davidson, manager of Canadian Acceptance Corporation Ltd., said lower income families will not just use the NHA changes to begin looking at more expensive housing requirements.

He said they will continue to seek the type of housing they always have, in the $18,000 to $25,000 level, and should have an easier time financing their purchase.

Davidson said the NHA changes are certain to affect mortgage business but was not willing to speculate on the effect on home prices in the city.

Besides the increased maximum levels for new and existing home mortgages, there were other significant changes to the NHA announced.

On new single-family dwellings, the amount of income that can be used to cover mortgage and property tax payments has been increased to 30 per cent from the former 27 per cent. Also, in calculating income, both the husband's and the wife's income will be counted, instead of the former practice of taking the borrower's earnings plus 50 per cent of the spouse's.

The 95 per cent of appraised value level now applies to the full value of the home. Formerly, the loans were based on 95 per cent of the first $20,000 value and 80 per cent of the remainder.

Ottawa Sends UIC Brass

Top officials of the Unemployment Insurance Commission flew from Ottawa to Vancouver Saturday to attempt to head off a dispute with International Woodworkers of America members protesting delays and disqualifications in benefits.

UIC chairman Guy Cousineau and two commissioners met five officials of the IWA—regional second vice-president Wyman Trineer and Bill Hawkes of Port Alberni, Ed Linder of Duncan, Ben Thompson of the loggers local and Hector Poirier of Vancouver.

Last week, several hundred members of the Port Alberni local of the IWA decided to march to Victoria to protest benefit delays and other Island IWA locals added their members would join in.

Now, however, Hawkes said any march would be held in abeyance. He said no date had been set for the march, although it was expected to be this week.

Hawkes said the UIC chiefs decided that there has been a substantial resumption of work in the industry following this summer's strike and fallers dispute and disqualification claims will end Sept. 3.

In addition, the UIC will review all further cases to determine retroactivity, he said.

"This is an improvement but we are not exactly jumping up and down with joy over it," he said.

Hawkes added that the UIC decision means no disqualifications after Sept. 3 for the reasons that there has not been a full resumption of work, together with the promised review.

Grades Going

Say farewell to Grades 9, 10, 11 and 12. They are not going to be around much longer.

The Greater Victoria school board took the first step at a meeting of its education committee Monday night towards eliminating grade distinctions above Grade 9.

The committee recommended to next Monday's board meeting that the action be taken and that students in high school be referred to in a different manner.

If the motion passes, and it is likely to since no serious objection was raised at the committee meeting, students now in Grade 9 will be referred to as being in "first year" of high school, students now in Grade 10 in "second year" and so on.

Trustee Dr. Phillip Ney made the suggestion, saying the grade distinction system is "quite arbitrary" and doesn't allow for students who may be halfway between two established grades.

Ney said the courses students take should be numbered according to their order, but that students should not have to be numbered in that manner.

Trustee Carron Jameson said there still will remain a definite distinction between the oldest high school students and the youngest elementary students regardless of the terms used to describe them.

"Yes, but it is an artificial distinction," said Ney, a child psychiatrist.

"Oh, I don't know. It's a matter of about four feet," quipped Jameson.

A word of caution came from district director of instruction Dr. John Wiens, who said the most hostile reaction to the change in terminology is likely to come from parents. "It just can't be done all that easily," he said.

New NHA financing regulation: 'no cure to great social ills.'

Mud Blamed on Builders

A city hall complaint to contractors over the problem of dirty, cluttered streets seems to have been misdirected in more ways than one, says Ed Phillips, manager of the Construction Association of Victoria.

The letter in question was sent last Friday by city engineer James Garnett, but still hasn't arrived because it was addressed to the association's former offices in Bastion Square.

Aside from the fact the letter was wrongly addressed, however, Phillips said today he can't understand why it should have been sent to his association at all.

DEVELOPING TREND

In the letter, Garnett says in recent years there has been "a gradually developing trend for contractors to take what appears to be a less responsible attitude" towards keeping streets clean and tidy when they are engaged on building contracts.

So many complaints have been reaching city hall, Garnett says, that he has been asked to see how existing regulations can be enforced or, failing this, to suggest tighter restrictions.

"It is my recommendation that the matter be drawn to the attention of contractors through your organization, and it is anticipated that they will respond to avoid the frequently dirty and littered streets adjacent to building sites."

Phillips, who was unaware of the complaint until approached by the Times, said it appears to be aimed at contractors in the residential field, whereas the 200 members of the Construction Association are primarily engaged in the public sector on such projects as schools, universities and hospitals.

These projects were usually in the "larger dollars" range.

STANFIELD TO VISIT

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield will visit Victoria next Monday, Michael Manning, president of the Victoria Progressive Conservative Association, said today.

Plans have not been completed, but Manning said the national Conservative leader will be arriving at the Empress Hotel sometime early Monday morning.

Stanfield will spend one day touring the two federal constituencies in Victoria and Esquimalt-Saanich.

the sites in question boarded around and "scrupulous" conditions enforced to avoid traffic obstruction, health hazards or any other form of nuisance, Phillips said.

Saying he would like some clarification from city hall as to where the problem really lies, Phillips admitted he has seen residential developments where unsatisfactory conditions exist.

Poll Ruled Out For Highrise

A large apartment building, Beckley Manor at 548 Dallas Rd., will be without a polling station in the federal election Oct. 30.

In the past two elections, the federal in 1968 then the provincial on Aug. 30, tenants of the waterfront highrise had only to walk a few steps and take the elevator to their polling station.

After bitter complaints from tenants about building security, apartment manager Walter Thorne has refused Victoria returning officer David Wilson permission to put a polling station in the building.

Since appointed returning officer in 1967, Wilson says he has tried to place polling stations in the most convenient places.

"The election act states that polling stations must have open doors and that they be accessible not only to polling staff who are working there but to candidates and scrutineers," Wilson said.

Beckley Manor, like many new apartments, has a controlled entrance, and Thorne said, "A lot of our tenants are nervous that anybody can drift in and things might be stolen."

Thorne admits nothing has happened in the past two elections but he said, "We don't want anything to happen, so I've told the returning officer no polling station in Beckley Manor."

Wilson said the decision by Thorne will pose a problem.

"It will probably mean the people in that apartment will have to go a considerable distance to a polling place."

GARBAGE UP TO HERE AND FED UP!

A man who claimed his garbage had been missed for two weeks threatened Monday night to deliver it to the steps of Saanich municipal hall this morning.

But he didn't have to act on his threat: Saanich garbage department made a special trip to pick up the load at 10 a.m., noting that it exceeded the maximum weight permitted.

Roland Stroub, 438 Ker, rose to his feet midway through a meeting of council's public works committee and asked whether Mayor Curtis was present, or if any aldermen were there.

He took the committee by surprise by relating his garbage collection problem, aggravated by the recent holiday weekend. There was no collection on Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 4, he said.

"If my garbage is not picked up by 11 a.m. tomorrow morning, it'll be on the sidewalk outside the hall," he said as chairman Ald. William Campbell tried to tell him the committee could not hear the matter.

"That's fine; you can do what you like with it," Campbell said, explaining that he should have taken the problem up with the appropriate municipal department. "They'll pick it up."

"But they won't," Stroub complained. Neatly bundled and tied bags of garbage left on top of garbage cans were not handled by the collection crew Monday morning which left a note on top saying: "Cans overloaded."

"What do they expect with two weeks without a pickup?" Stroub asked.

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Changes in the National Housing Act permitting a lower down payment on new homes sound good on the surface but still make home-buying an expensive proposition, says Victoria Real Estate Board manager John Hicks.

He said the new NHA plan permitting the purchase of a $32,000 house with $2,000 down is "almost silly."

He said: "Who with $2,000 could afford to purchase a $32,000 house? Besides the cost of the house, the purchaser needs money for furniture. That could run between $4,000 and $5,000."

"If a person can only afford $2,000 down payment I don't think he can afford a $32,000 house."

Hicks said the resulting $30,000 mortgage at the current Victoria rate of 9 1/4 per cent over 30 years would cost the purchaser $83 per month, including taxes.

By the old 25 per cent guideline, the person would have to be earning more than $1,130 per month to be able to afford the new NHA deal.

Even amortizing the mortgage over the maximum 40 years would not reduce the payments low enough, he said. Monthly payments would still be above $230 per month.

"These changes sound great on the surface but when you get down to the arithmetic you discover that very few people will be able to afford new houses at these rates."

"It just makes it easier for those who could afford it anyway," he said.

Under the new regulations, persons will be able to spend up to 30 per cent of their monthly income on mortgage payments including taxes, although 25 per cent has long been considered a practical maximum in terms of housing debt for the average person.

In calculating income, the full earnings of husband and wife now may be counted. In the past only 50 per cent of the income of the spouse could be considered under terms of NHA loans.

Loans have been set at 95 per cent of appraised value instead of 95 per cent of the appraised value on the first $20,000 plus 80 per cent on the remaining amount.

These rules apply to new houses only.

Where existing homes are being bought, the maximum loan has been increased to $23,000 from $18,000 and loans are based upon 95 per cent of appraised value.

Hicks said the interest rate of 9 per cent to 9 1/4 per cent is the biggest obstacle to home buying.

He said the federal government, if it was serious about assisting home purchases, should subsidize the interest rate to bring it down to about six per cent.

A six per cent mortgage of $30,000 amortized over 25 years would mean payments of $191.96 per month, he said. "That is getting closer to the range where the average person can afford to buy a home. Interest rates make all the difference in working out monthly payments."

RESIDENTS IRKED BY SMOKE SCREEN

The Millstream landfill has caused more anger among residents in the Langford-Thetis Lake area.

A Langford fire department official said today smoke from the landfill began filling the streets in the surrounding area about 11 p.m. Monday.

Today the department has received numerous complaints from the Thetis Lake subdivision and the buildings across the street from the fire hall were barely visible.

The fire department has no control over the smoldering garbage.

"The smoke is coming up through 40 or 50 feet of garbage," the spokesman said.

He said firemen covered the fire, which has been burning for two weeks, with a thousand gallons of water, but it was "about as effective as dumping a one gallon bucket in the middle of Thetis Lake."

Dog Owners Break Tent Bylaw

Competitors in the three-day dog show in Sidney are creating what the building inspector describes as a "deteriorating situation" by camping on Sanscha grounds.

About 450 dogs have been entered in the Shoreline Kennel Club Show, which opened Sunday and the grounds around Sanscha exhibition hall are filled with the owners' tents, campers and trailers.

Building Inspector Hans Schneider pointed out in a report to council Monday the grounds are being used for transient camping facilities contrary to municipal bylaw.

There are no sewer or water hookups available for trailers and Sanscha restroom facilities are locked at night.

The report added that Sidney had turned away several trailer clubs and caravans which have applied for permission to camp locally.

Council instructed the municipal clerk to prepare legislation to control transient camping and will also investigate the cost of sanitary dumping facilities for self-contained trailers.

A man who prevented a contractor's crew from completing demolition work on an old building in James Bay Monday will plead in court Sept. 19 on a charge of assault by trespass.

Thirty-year-old Bob Batty was arrested by Victoria city police after a bulldozer was kept from demolishing the old house by a man who jumped on to the building's roof.

Batty was released on his own recognizance and will seek legal aid before making his plea in court.

The house is located at 447 Kingston, about two blocks from the legislative buildings.

Batty had earlier in the day been displaying protest signs near the house, castigating the department of public works for allowing the old building to be levelled.

The house it to make way for a 60-space parking lot for government employees.

Police were called to the scene Monday morning after the bulldozer was prevented from doing its work.

Batty, who describes himself as unemployed, moved to the Victoria area from Vancouver recently. He said all he wanted to do was save the house, because he felt it could be used as a neighborhood centre in the James Bay area.

DRUGS TO CITIZENS

A citizen's committee will likely be established by the Greater Victoria school board to determine what the public wants in the way of warning its children on the dangers of drug abuse.

The committee, another of a series which is designed to get community feedback on matters affecting the school board and the general public, was suggested to the board by Robert Mitchell, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers Association.

Mitchell told the school board's education committee Monday night that he is not convinced that the Social Credit government's method of campaigning against drug abuse was a successful one. "I don't believe in the scare campaign," he said, adding that the problem might be more effectively handled in family-type discussions.

He said a citizens' committee, one of which has already studied the problem of corporal punishment in the schools, might bring out the community's wishes best. "We must have an accurate reflection of what the society and the community want," he said.

Most of the trustees agreed and it was recommended by the committee to take the necessary action at next Monday's regular board meeting.

Lindholm, Bruch in Race

Louis Lindholm, 47-year-old Victoria lawyer, announced today he will seek nomination as Liberal candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich for the federal election Oct. 30.

Nominating meeting will be held Friday at Mt. View High School at 8 p.m.

Lindholm, a resident of North Saanich, ran for the Liberals provincially in 1969 in Saanich and the Islands. He ran third behind the Social Credit's John Tisdale and runner-up Donald Johansson. New Democratic candidate.

Tisdale, who was defeated in his bid for nomination for the Aug. 30 provincial election announced Monday, he will be seeking nomination with the federal Social Credit party in Esquimalt-Saanich.

Lindholm is a native of Chilliwack, but has resided in the Victoria area since 1953.

He is president of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital Society board and in June was elected head of the Victoria Bar Association.

Herb Bruch, defeated in the Aug. 30 provincial election after serving as MLA for 19 years in Esquimalt, said to day he will stand for nomination for the Social Credit party in Esquimalt-Saanich federal constituency.

The 52-year-old Saskatchewan native said he would "continue being a full-time member if elected, as I was when I was an MLA."

A Costly Job

DEAR ABBY: I have worked in the same office for 18 years and there are many fine people here, but here is the problem:

Whenever somebody dies, gets married, has a baby or retires, I am the one who has the "privilege" of collecting for the flowers or gift from the office gang.

Believe me, it's a pain in the neck. I have sometimes waited until the last minute, hoping somebody else would head up the collecting, but nobody does.

I have six children, and plenty of places for my money, but this collecting job has cost me a lot over the years. People say, "I'm a little short right now, but if you put in for me now I'll pay you next payday." I put in for them, and that's the end of it. A dollar here, a dollar there. Maybe they intend to pay me back, but most of them forget.

Abby, please put this letter in your column. Everybody here reads it. It might wage up a few who still owe me. No name, please. Just sign me . . . The Collector.

DEAR COLLECTOR: Here's your letter, and I hope it pays off.

DEAR ABBY: My wife has suggested that I learn to play bridge (her favorite daytime hobby) so that we can socialize with her bridge-playing friends in the evening.

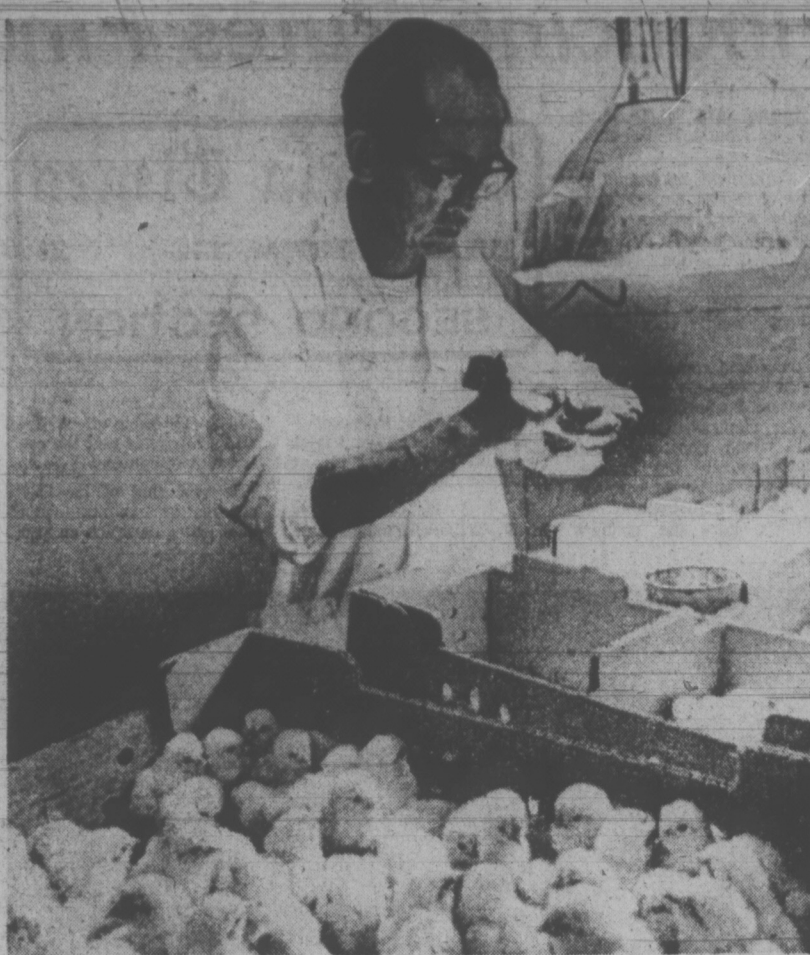

I have explained to her that I am not really very fond of card playing and don't care to get involved.

She contends that I am being very selfish and inconsiderate by not learning to play bridge simply to please her. Conversely, I say that she is selfish and inconsiderate to insist that I engage in an activity which doesn't appeal to me in the least. (I would never ask that of her.)

What do you think? No Card Player

DEAR NO: You won that hand.

24-Hour-a-Day
Market Force
For Consumers

BELGRADE (UPI) — Three Belgrade businessmen had just finished dinner at the fashionable Topclider restaurant.

Then came the bill—three times the normal price.

Within minutes a city emergency inspection team was on the scene, rectified the bill, and slapped a fine on the restaurant's manager.

This kind of swift retribution is typical of the Yugoslav capital's 80-man market inspection force—complete with squad cars, a 24-hour-a-day switchboard, and the power to impose on-the-spot fines or issue court subpoenas.

"We average about 50 to 60 calls a day, on everything from sanitary conditions in a kennel to the way a baker slices his bread," said Jovan Mileusic, Belgrade's chief market inspector.

Mileusic's staff is not a police force, and can make no arrests.

But they can fine violators of market standards up to 100 dinars ($6) on the spot, or order a court appearance where the offender faces fines up to 2,000 dinars ($120).

"Just call 27-000 if there's any question—our number is posted on the wall of nearly every restaurant in town," Mileusic said.

Belgrade's market inspection force is not unique to the Yugoslav capital. By federal law, similar forces operate in densely populated areas all over Yugoslavia—an inspection network even American consumer champion Ralph Nader could envy.

"In capitalist countries, it's up to the individual merchant to regulate the quality of his merchandise and services. But here in Yugoslavia, where stores and restaurants are socially owned, uniform standards are in the social interest," Mileusic said.

The most common complaints to reach the inspectors are for overcharging or for skimpy meal portions in restaurants.

"We raided some restaurants the other day where we knew most of the customers to be drunks and the waitresses call girls. When they saw us coming they started to jump out the windows," Mileusic said.

It is for such reasons that inspectors usually visit business premises incognito.

Fathers Unite To Fight For Equal Rights

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A man paraded outside the Baltimore County Courthouse wearing nothing but his underwear and a barrel. The front of the barrel bore a sign reading "divorce American style," and another on the back warned "this could happen to you."

The man was Paul Hanson, 55, chairman of Fathers United for Equal Rights, a Maryland group protesting the courts' treatment of men in divorce cases.

"The laws stink, the lawyers are stupid and the judges are so slow to change," Hanson said in summing up his opinion of justice in divorce.

"Unless you've been through it, you wouldn't believe some of the injustices. A man thinking he can get protection in a divorce court is completely naive."

Hanson, an associate professor of English at Towson State College, has been through it. He is particularly incensed that the laws are based on the premise that, no matter who is at fault, "when a marriage fails, a man has to support the woman until the day she dies or remarries."

So, two years ago, he placed a classified ad in the newspapers to find out how many other men in Maryland had similar gripes. The ad brought a half dozen responses and fathers united was born. Membership is now over 350.

"We get mail from as far away as California but I tell them to form grass roots groups in their own states," he said. "A national organization grinds out things in mimeograph machines and doesn't get much accomplished."

Hanson's group is out to strike down all of Maryland's divorce laws. A class action suit has been filed in federal court challenging the laws on the grounds they deny due process and equal protection guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

"The problem is that the laws go back to ecclesiastical courts of the middle ages, and our mentality hasn't changed much since then," Hanson said.

B.C. Nutritionist Writes New Daily Food Guide

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Home economics departments in Victoria area schools will begin using a new daily food guide this fall, just published by the provincial health branch.

The new food guide, a simplified and modernized version of the 24-year-old Canada's Food Guide, was prepared by British Columbia's provincial nutritionist, Pat Wolczuk.

"We seem to have found something that's really working," said Miss Wolczuk.

Review First

The nutritionist hopes her new guide will be accepted as a new national food guide for Canadians. She will present it to other provincial nutritionists at the federal-provincial nutritionists' conference in Ottawa Sept. 25. She doubts if the guide will be accepted immediately — a review of it will probably be recommended.

"I doubt if the format would change radically" during the review, she said. "It's too logical and it's too easy to work with."

The new guide is still being evaluated, but it has been tested successfully with consumer groups, low income family

WENDY DEY - EDITOR

families in Vancouver, and in Nanaimo schools.

Basic change in the guide is the grouping of essential foods into four groups — milk, fruit and vegetables, breads and cereals, and meat, fish, poultry and eggs. The four food groups concept has been used in the United States for five years, said Miss Wolczuk, but is relatively new to Canada.

"The four food groups are an easier teaching tool," she said. Somehow, Canada's Food Guide has never made an impact on children, she added.

"A balanced meal contains something from all four food groups," Miss Wolczuk said, and that's easy for children to remember.

Only at breakfast can you skip one of the four groups if you want, she said. A piece of whole grain toast, a glass of juice and a glass of milk make an adequate breakfast.

"The guide as it stands is only 1,200 or 1,400 calories,"

Miss Wolczuk said. Bread and potatoes are given less importance than in Canada's Food Guide, she said.

"There's no need for eating the amount of bread we ate in the past," she said.

The only potatoes her list contains are baked potatoes. Potatoes can be a source of vitamin C, but this vitamin is destroyed by heat and oxidation. Boiled, mashed and french fried potatoes lose most of their vitamin C before eating, she said.

"The idea of giving potatoes an importance over other vegetables is wrong," Miss Wolczuk said. Canada's Food Guide recommends one serving of potatoes a day, plus other vegetables.

Miss Wolczuk's guide recommends only three servings of fruit and vegetables, compared with five in Canada's Food Guide. However, it recommends servings of meat, fish, poultry or eggs, compared with one serving in the older guide.

The main reason for the increased meat is to get the daily requirements of iron a person needs, she said.

"Often modern food habits have been eliminating iron from a woman's diet," Miss Wolczuk said. Iron-rich foods like spinach and liver — especially important for women — are not commonly eaten, she said.

Canada's Food Guide recommends taking 400 international units of vitamin D for all children and expectant or nursing mothers.

Not Necessary

For most people, this is not necessary any more, said Miss Wolczuk. For the past few years, most milk has had vitamin D added, enough to meet daily requirements. Only if children are drinking raw milk should they have a vitamin D capsule, she said.

The new guide is more flexible in the kinds of food people can eat and more specific in the amounts they should eat. A Chinese diet or an Italian diet could be adapted to the new guide, said Miss Wolczuk.

Although revisions have been made from time to time, the original groundwork for Canada's Food Guide was done in 1948, she said.

Pat Wolczuk's new guide tested.

HERE'S NEW GUIDE

MILK AND MILK PRODUCTS

Children, 2-3 servings
Adolescents, 4 servings
Adults, 1 1/2 servings

One serving may be one ounce of cheddar cheese, 2 slices processed cheese, 1 cup cottage cheese, 3 medium scoops ice cream, 1 cup milk pudding, 1 cup cream soup, 1 cup milk.

Children and adolescents need a vitamin D supplement (400 I.U. daily) if milk does not have vitamin D added.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

3 servings including one rich in vitamin C each day, one rich in vitamin A every other day.

Some vitamin C rich choices are oranges, grapefruit and their juices; vitaminized apple juice; tomatoes and tomato juice; raw cabbage; broccoli; baked potatoes; fresh strawberries.

MEAT, FISH, POULTRY, EGGS

2 servings

A serving may be 3-4 oz. of lean meat, fish, poultry or 2 eggs. Vegetable proteins such as nuts, peanut butter, dried beans and peas, may be used instead of meat occasionally.

Children under 10 and persons over 60 require only 1 1/2 servings daily.

BREADS AND CEREALS

3 servings

A serving may be: 1 slice of whole grain or enriched bread; 1 cup flaked or puffed cereal; 3/4 cup cooked cereal such as oatmeal, macaroni, spaghetti, noodles; 1 average dinner roll; 1 hamburger or hot dog bun.

All breads and cereals should be whole grain or enriched.

Para-Legal People Ease Caseloads

HALIFAX (CP) — The relationship between law and the poor is increasingly becoming a problem and needs an injection of new ideas.

So when legal aid offices here were unable to handle the large numbers seeking legal advice, it was decided to look elsewhere for help.

Under a $10,000 Opportunities for Youth grant, eight second and third-year law students at Dalhousie University began a study of the feasibility of training lay people to bridge the gap between the need for legal assistance and the services available.

Speaking generally, said Prof. Ian Cowie of Dalhousie, executive director of Dal Legal Aid and adviser to the youth project, "traditionally law students are a very, very conservative bunch of people."

"They come from an upper-to-middle class background. They go through law school and are programmed into thinking in a certain way... into going out into a profession whereby they article, they go into a law firm, they make as much money as they can... that's the normal law syndrome."

Push Them

"Law school curriculum tends to push them into the choice of opting into the business-commercial type of area."

As a result they are not exposed to some of the injustices and the problems the poor face.

"You've got to try and break that, and you do that by exposing them to the sort of injustice that they see by working in the legal aid offices," he said.

"Up until April this year, Dal Legal Aid was the only legal aid office in the province. We couldn't meet the demands of all as they existed."

The Nova Scotia legal aid plan started up its first Halifax office in April. Once again, the needs still aren't being met. There are a large number of people who aren't getting legal services."

It was then decided to attempt to demonstrate that it was possible to train an utilize lay people in a legal aid office setting to provide a more effective and efficient service.

In the United States "they train para-legal people to work in a para-legal setting."

There is really acceptance that these people have something to contribute."

The group advertised for applicants for the para-legal training. Some 120 persons expressed interest. Eventually 18 part-time and eight full-time trainees were accepted.

The part-time persons were trained in the area of divorce and matrimonial counselling and now are working with the Matrimonial Counselling Association, a new organization in Halifax made up of a number of local church and community groups.

And, under further financial assistance from the federal justice department, eight full-time persons were given a five-week training course in family law.

"Training was done in essence by a group of the project participants and we brought in resource personnel at various stages. We used a fair number of the faculty here and the chief justice of the trial division of the Nova Scotia Supreme Court has given us a great deal of support."

At Dal Legal Aid, said Prof. Cowie, about 40 per cent of the caseload is in family law, 30 per cent in criminal law and 13 per cent in consumer and debt problems.

The project even got endorsement from the Nova Scotia Bar Society.

Project Endorsed

"In fact they wrote a letter of recommendation to OFY endorsing the project so that we could get the money for the training program."

Bill Fenrick, a Dal law student and member of the OFY project, said he hopes "as time passes lawyers both in legal aid practices and private law practices will realize that this type of person is very convenient to have around."

"We're trying to invent almost a new career pattern for people. We think that as time passes law offices will make increasing use of legal para-professionals to improve their own efficiency and cost effectiveness."

Well, It Isn't Easy Being a Millionaire

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UPI) — At 11 p.m. every Friday, millions of Hungarians sit with ears tuned hopefully to Radio Budapest. The hope of each listener — to become an instant millionaire.

The quick road to fortune is Hungary's national lottery which pays a top prize of two million forints ($80,000). To win, a player buys a ticket with 50 numbers and marks off five of them. If he picks the right five, he wins.

Solo winners take the whole two million. If more than one player picks the winning number, the sum is divided equally. Another two million forints is divided in smaller prizes among players who pick four, three or two of the winning numbers.

Playing the lottery is a weekly ritual for 20 million Hungarians.

A number of top winners have found their good luck a mixed blessing. One, Janos Foldi, a waiter, was so beset by persons wanting to share his wealth he finally packed up and simply disappeared.

"It's terrible," he said before dropping from sight. "One man wanted me to send him money to buy an artificial leg. A teen-age girl wrote me that if I didn't send her money she would tell police I raped her. Some wrote me that if I didn't send money they would kill me and my family."

So Foldi went into hiding. Pal Kovacs, a miner in the small community of Ajka, also won two million. His first act was to build himself a 12-room villa where he lived, briefly, in high style.

'Didn't Know Rules'

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta dairy industry did not know about provincial health regulations under which the Northern Alberta Dairy Pool was fined $50, says William McBride, dairy pool general manager.

However, provincial health officials say the firm knew about the regulations controlling bacteria count in pasteurized milk because firms are warned before they are prosecuted.

"I lost my friends," he said. "They would not come to see me. They called me 'the new aristocrat' and 'the count.' I missed them, and I liked living in my old small apartment better."

So Kovacs sold his villa, moved back to his old flat, went back to his job and became one of the boys again.

Another lottery millionaire, fisherman Tibor Torok, also moved into a large new home — and then the begging letters started pouring in.

Don't Forget to Water
The Balcony Plants

Apartment balconies become an important part of our city landscape as more private gardens succumb to changing times.

This summer we notice all manner of container-grown plants bringing pleasure to their owners and anyone else who is lucky enough to glimpse them, either from street level or from adjacent balconies.

Tubs, baskets, wood and plastic planters, as well as more unorthodox copper and pottery containers are used in growing small trees, evergreen shrubs or the showy summer annuals.

With the advent of cooler, less continuously sunny weather, balcony gardeners may be inclined to neglect will shorten the display of bloom.

On a balcony with overhead shelter of the balcony above, watering will need attention so long as the annuals are blooming. Less often, certainly, but according to the size of container, the soil will begin to dry out once or twice weekly, thus signalling the need for watering.

Baskets hanging from overhead supports will need either an occasional soaking in a tub or a slow application from a jug.

Begonias and fuchsias on balconies should continue in flower until a really hard frost, as will the showy geraniums. With extra care, even petunias and marigolds will maintain a good show. Spend a few minutes each day in removing faded blooms and yellow leaves to improve the picture.

Remember my suggestion of using a spare tub or planter for making renewed good soil for next spring? These plant pieces are the makings of soil. Instead of discarding them into the garbage chute, put them into the spare tub beneath the old soil. Put the tub into a sunny place on the balcony and keep it damp. Add tea leaves, coffee grounds and crushed eggshells, vegetable scraps and hair comings, always covering with a little soil.

Whether geraniums, fuchsias or begonias in balcony tubs can be kept over for next year will depend on several things.

One is whether you are inclined to care for the plants during a winter which may bring severe frosts and icy cold winds. Another point is whether you want to start the plants into growth again in spring, some of them by taking fresh cuttings.

If you are away for several weeks in winter, the best plan is to pull out the summer flowering plants when they finish blooming, chop them into pieces and bury them beneath the soil of the empty tubs or planters.

Sprinkle a teaspoon of 6-8-6 fertilizer over the soil before watering well. Or, water with a solution of alginure one teaspoon to a quart of water.

Permanent shrubs and small trees on a balcony will need watering probably every week during winter, according to their exposure to rain.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

At the non-expert duplicate bridge level, most players strive to play contracts at no-trump because no-trump counts more than the major suits. But they are wrong in adopting this preconceived approach as a part of their philosophy, for on many occasions a game or a slam in a major suit will produce a better result than will a game or slam at no-trump.

As evident on this latter point, observe today's deal, which was played in a duplicate game. Virtually all of the North-South pairs arrived at six no-trump, at which contract twelve tricks were made. The bidding and play presented today occurred at one of the tables.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH		WEST		EAST
♠ K Q J 2		♠ 8 5		♠ 10 7 6 3
♥ K Q 10 8		♥ 7 6 4		♥ J 9
♦ K 5		♦ J 10 6 3		♦ Q 7 4 2
♣ K 8 4		♣ J 10 9 5		♣ Q 7 3
SOUTH
♠ A 9 4
♥ A 5 3 2
♦ A 9 8
♣ A 6 2

The bidding:
South 1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass
West Pass 2 ♣ 6 ♣ Pass
North 2 ♣ 6 ♣ Pass
East Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

North's two-club response was the initiation of the Stayman Convention, commanding partner to bid major suit of four or more cards, if the latter had one. When South bid two hearts, North, disdaining the use of any convention to check for aces, promptly contracted for the small slam in hearts.

After South had won the opening lead with his ace of clubs, he played three rounds of trumps, gathering in the adversely-held pieces. Then came four rounds of spades, South discarding his losing club on the fourth spade lead. This was followed by the king of diamonds, the ace of diamonds, and a third diamond, North ruffing the latter lead.

Thus declarer ended up making all thirteen tricks: four spades, five hearts, two diamonds, and two clubs. For this North-South secured a score of 1480 (500 for a vulnerable game, 750 for a vulnerable slam, a trick score of 180, and an overtrick worth 30 points.)

At virtually all the other tables, South opened the bidding with one no-trump, and North, on his 17-high-card points, counted to a guaranteed minimum of 33 points in high cards. Since 33 points is the goal for a small slam, the various North players bid six no-trump at once.

As can be observed, exactly twelve tricks — no more and no less — were there for the taking. The score for bidding and making six no-trump was 1440 (500 for a vulnerable game, 750 for the small slam, and a trick score of 190).

And so South six-heart bidder, by making the overtrick, outscored the six-no-trump bidders by a score of 1460 to 1440. For this he secured a deserved "top on the board."

Saanich Works Recommends New Park

A proposal to acquire a new park in Northridge subdivision by local improvement process was recommended to Saanich council Monday night by its public works committee.

The project previously was opposed by a number of residents of the area already subdivided because of the potential hazard to small children of a pond which will form part of the park.

But it would be the purchasers of newly subdivided lots who would actually pay for the development.

Planner Tom Loney recommended pond improvement be deferred until the adjoining lots are developed to minimize the hazard to children posed now by a rather isolated pond set back some distance from the established part of Northridge.

It is the subdivider's intention to offer the land to Saanich, which would then improve the pond.

Loney pointed out the new pond, when banks are graded and the immediate area brushed out, would be more exposed and subject to supervision than the existing one.

Local improvement charges per lot would amount to about $34 a year and about 100 lots would be involved.

Estimated cost of the land would be $45,000, or $7,500 each for the six lots which could otherwise be developed, which the committee was told is less than market value.

Chairman Ald. William said he had attended a meeting of about 30 residents at which only one objection to the proposal was voiced. But only one person attending would be included in the local improvement, he added.

Ald. Frank Waring said he thought it an excellent idea to create park land, but he cautioned against raising taxes too much.

Campbell wondered why the proposal was presented as a local improvement, and concluded it could be that the developers considered the value of the nearby properties would be enhanced by the park. He thought the price was high.

Strike 'Barbaric' —Justice Minister

CALGARY (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang said Monday the strike is a "barbaric weapon" that should be eliminated.

The minister, who speaks for the Canadian wheat board, made the reference while talking of the problems and hopes of Canada selling more grain.

He said in a speech to a local service club that one problem is that of labor strife.

"The strike is a barbaric weapon which injures many innocent people and it must be eliminated."

"As Martin O'Connell, the minister of labor has said, 'the parties themselves should soon face the reality that arbitration and reasonable judgment are the only sane solutions when they cannot agree.'"

Labor strife in the last few months has resulted in the closing of the St. Lawrence River ports of Montreal, Quebec and Trois-Rivieres and the ports of British Columbia. In the former case grain shipments were hampered and in the latter grain movement out of the ports was halted.

Parliament passed emergency legislation to open the ports in both cases.

Lang said if grain exports are to reach one billion bushels a year there will have to be more grain storage facilities in B.C., unit trains to the St. Lawrence and the Atlantic ports, more loading facilities at Churchill, Man., "when feasible," a "long look at problems created by labor strikes and the operation use of the grain handling innovation."

Added capacity was needed even if the one billion target was reached only one year in three.

He said the wheat board "actually had to back away from a few sales because of the limit on our ability to deliver."

The government had acquired 2,000 hopper cars to produce a bigger and better rail movement of grain at no cost to the farmers.

"The government is ready to take on or encourage the next step — more storage and loading space at Vancouver, new ones at Roberts Bank and for more use at Prince Rupert as well as more facilities at Churchill when feasible."

The minister said he foresees unit trains of grain cleaned at inland terminals going straight to the St. Lawrence or Atlantic when the St. Lawrence Seaway was operating at its limit.

Canadians Only

EDMONTON (CP) — The city library board has approved a resolution making it mandatory that any new director of libraries be a Canadian.

May Gardner, board chairman, said it was felt a director should be hired within Canada and that the personnel department had received 36 applications for the position, 16 of them from the United States.

Care Gap Closed

EDMONTON (CP) — Albertans who move to other provinces will continue to receive benefits under Alberta Health Care until they become eligible for the coverage offered in their new place of residence.

The province announced the change and said it is intended to eliminate the gap in medical protection that used to occur when moves were made.

Trustees' Stand

EDMONTON (CP) — Amendments to provincial labor legislation were proposed by the Alberta School Trustees' Association in a brief Monday to a provincial committee on labor legislation.

The trustees' proposals are designed to prevent work stoppages under a proposed new Alberta School Employees Labor Relations Act governing teachers, bus drivers, maintenance workers and other school board employees.

In the initial phase of negotiations, the proposed act would place no time limit on collective bargaining procedures. However, should negotiations under these conditions break down, a second phase could be initiated by either party.

Support Switched

WINNIPEG (CP) — Joe Borowski, a former cabinet minister in Manitoba's NDP government, said Monday he will support the Liberals and oppose the NDP in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Speaking at a news conference, Borowski said he did not agree with all Prime Minister Trudeau's policies, but considered them a lesser evil to the policies of NDP national leader David Lewis.

Who's Been Necking?

LONDON (CP) — One remedy for testing your wife's fidelity is offered by the British medical publication On Call. It suggests that a husband away for the night should measure his wife's neck with a tie before leaving.

A woman's neck glands will remain swollen for hours after making love. If, on his return, the tie is a tighter fit, she has had a visitor during his absence. "There's more to sex than meets the eye," the article adds.

Freedom To Sue Proposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A working paper prepared by the British Columbia Law Reform Commission recommends that citizens be allowed to sue the government without prior approval of the government.

The commission, established in 1969 under former federal justice minister E. Davie Fulton, said the paper released Monday is not its final report on the subject and was being circulated to gather comment and criticism.

The report recommends that the procedure for bringing legal action against the Crown be the same as the procedure for legal action between ordinary citizens.

It says the system used now in B.C. has been abolished by the federal government and all other provinces except Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

The working paper also recommends the abolition of other immunities, through which "the Crown enjoys an advantage over its subjects."

Charged in Death

CRANBROOK (CP) — Alan McDonald, 22, of Deroche, charged with criminal negligence in the shooting death of a CP Rail employee near Cranbrook was released on $1,000 bail after a court appearance Monday. McDonald entered no plea and no trial date was set. He is charged in the death of William Fleury, 43, who was killed by a shotgun blast while working at a CP Rail siding at Fort Steele.

Haynes Answered

TRAIL (CP) — George Cady, national president of the Canadian Workers' Union, said Monday there is no reason why his union should not be allowed to join the British Columbia Federation of Labor if the union is certified as the bargaining agent for 3,800 Cominco Ltd. employees.

Cady was commenting on a telegram from Ray Haynes, general secretary of the federation, warning of the seriousness of a move toward a breakaway union.

Cady said there are 160,000 free trade unionists operating outside the Canadian Labor Congress. He said he sees no reason why the CWU can not exist in the same manner.

Backlog Easing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Court Judge Larry Eckardt said Monday the backlog of cases before the city's courts should disappear by the end of the month. Eckardt said about two-thirds of the backlog caused by Vancouver's civic strike had been cleared up.

Golf Pro Guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Joseph Jeroski, 34, an assistant golf professional at Fraser-view golf course, was found guilty in provincial court Monday of charges of recording bets and bookmaking. He was remanded to Sept. 28 for sentencing.

Child Dies

SURREY (CP) — Shaun Arthur Eteson, 14 months, of Surrey died in hospital as a result of injuries suffered when struck by a car driven by his father.

Pleads Guilty

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Donald Ronald Scott, 17, of Burnaby pleaded guilty Monday to a charge of arson in a $400,000 fire that destroyed the F. W. Howay elementary school in New Westminster July 26. He also pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering when he appeared in provincial court. Scott will be sentenced Monday.

Island N-Plant Proposed

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

A nuclear reactor plant to generate Vancouver Island's future electrical power by 1981 is recommended in the B.C. Energy Board's report released Monday.

Feelings Mixed Over Report

The energy board chose nuclear power despite objections from one of its own members and from the consulting firm that conducted the 10-volume study, rejecting a system of overhead transmission from the B.C. mainland because of hazardous mountain terrain.

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside dissented on the board's recommendation about the Vancouver Island power supply. The board also rejected development of the Moran Dam on the Fraser River — at least until 1990 — mainly because of environmental considerations.

But the report warned that dikes along the Fraser flood plains can provide only a "false sense of security" and the Moran dam may be the only real protection.

Excluding Vancouver Island, the province's future power needs should be met with a mixture of hydro and coal-burning heating plants, the report says.

Costs of the new power development are not spelled out in the report, but they are estimated at "several billion dollars" between 1978 and 1990, the period for which no plans have yet been adopted by the B.C. government.

The Energy Board report was commissioned in June, 1970, and the date on the red plastic-bound copies is Aug. 31, 1972, the day after the B.C. election. The report became something of an issue during the election campaign, with government opponents demanding its immediate release.

Premier Bennett, who is expected to resign his government immediately, released the report apparently without studying it. The energy board's chief executive, John Southworth, delivered copies in person to the government on Monday and the four copies of the board's recommendations were distributed to the media a few hours later.

The main consulting work, done by the Montreal Engineering Company Ltd., fills ten volumes and weighs 50 pounds and costs $500 a set. Three sets were delivered to the provincial secretary's office, along with the shorter report by the board itself, which wrote only 48 pages.

The two power issues most debated by the board were the nuclear power question and the hydro power question. Quaipe said B.C. Hydro should look into thermal power generating stations using fossilized fuel.

"We still have thousands of tons of coal that has not been mined yet. Fossilized fuel should definitely be considered before nuclear power. With the technology we have Prospects for a nuclear power plant on Vancouver Island brought a cool response today from Duncan Mayor Jim Quaipe and enthusiasm from Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney.

Provincial Liberal leader David Anderson said he is pleased to see the energy board has said there is no need to proceed with a nuclear plant right away.

The B.C. Energy Board Monday recommended that a nuclear power plant be considered for Vancouver Island within a 50-mile radius of Duncan, which would include Nanaimo.

Lorne Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada, has urged that a nuclear plant be constructed near Nanaimo while B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum, energy board chairman has advocated a nuclear power plant near Duncan.

Duncan Mayor Quaipe said today any efforts to use nuclear power should be stalled "until we definitely know it is safe, there will be no thermal pollution and the operation would not be hazardous to the residents of Vancouver Island either through technological or mechanical difficulties."

Quaipe said he agreed with the engineering adviser to the board who urged caution on the nuclear power question. Quaipe said B.C. Hydro should look into thermal power generating stations using fossilized fuel.

"We still have thousands of tons of coal that has not been mined yet. Fossilized fuel should definitely be considered before nuclear power. With the technology we have

The B.C. Energy Board's call for nuclear power for Vancouver Island was made with no study of the high costs involved, a dissenting member of the board said today.

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, former co-chairman of B.C. Hydro, said at a press conference the board refused to print his dissenting report, which backed the basic engineering study prepared for the board.

In its majority decision released Monday, the board rejected a plan for integrating Vancouver Island with mainland power by means of overhead lines along Bute Inlet, because of the risk of damage to the lines.

Keenleyside said the board's report "was so worded as to give a seriously inaccurate interpretation of the facts."

This has caused the chief consultant, J. K. Sexton, to resign from his continuing association with the board, Keenleyside added. Keenleyside said the development of nuclear power for Vancouver Island has not been studied sufficiently to justify the board's recommendation to begin a program for nuclear power production by 1981.

Dispute to Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The chairman of the federal public service staff relations board, Jacob Finkelstein, has decided for establishment of a conciliation board in the dispute between postal workers and the government, leaving open the possibility of a postal strike before the Oct. 30 election.

Vallieres 'Guilty'

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Vallieres, a Quebec nationalist writer once described by a crown attorney as the leader of the Front de Liberation du Quebec, pleaded guilty Monday to three of 10 charges in connection with terrorism. The three charges to which he pleaded guilty involved counselling political kidnapping. They arose from a letter he wrote in 1968.

LABRADOR CITY, Nfld. (CP) — Members of the largest local of striking iron ore workers here voted today to accept a new contract with Iron Ore Co. of Canada Ltd. and are to return to work Wednesday.

Resistance Tough

QUANG TRI, Vietnam (AP) — South Vietnamese marines fought their way into the Quang Tri Citadel today but were encountering tough resistance. One source estimated that about 400 North Vietnamese troops were still entrenched in the 19th-century fortress whose political symbolism outweighs its military value in the battle of Quang Tri.

Sit-In Ends

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Catholic School Board effectively ended a five-day sit-in by a small group of parents in a west-end school Monday by sealing off the building. Parents had occupied the St. Jean Dumas school and established makeshift classrooms for their children as a protest against closure of the school and transfer of its students to other area schools.

Trawl Wires Cut

REYKJAVIK (Reuters) — An Icelandic coast guard ship cut both trawl wires of the British trawler Lucida today off Iceland's northwest coast, the coast guard announced. A spokesman said the trawler had disobeyed an order to stop fishing inside Iceland's new 50-mile limit.

Realistic 'Games'

VIENNA (Reuters) — Thousands of Soviet bloc troops swept across Czechoslovakia today in war games intended to test nuclear capabilities. The five-country exercise has been billed as one of the biggest — and probably most realistic — ever staged by forces of the Warsaw Pact.

HEATH PROMOTES IRISH TALKS

Times News Services

Britain's Prime Minister Edward Heath today sought to persuade Northern Ireland's main Roman Catholic opposition party to join the province's Protestant leaders in political talks later this month.

Government sources said Heath would make the appeal in a meeting with leaders of Northern Ireland's Social Democratic and Labor Party at Chequers, his country retreat.

However, SDLP leader Gerry Fitt said his party would not attend the Sept. 25 talks unless the 370 men still being held in Ulster as suspected members of the Irish Republican Army are first released.

The all-party talks were called by the Heath government in hopes they will lead to a long-term political settlement in Northern Ireland.

In Belfast, troops guarded the Royal Victoria Hospital today against threatened attacks on the huge medical complex by the IRA's militant provisional wing.

A statement issued Monday night by the provisionals said unless troops were withdrawn from the 1,200-bed hospital "any type of attack on the hospital is now possible."

"The hospital has now entered the character of a fortress and is no longer definable as a neutralized zone," the statement said. "Resulting casualties will be the responsibility of the British."

Warren Wooing Socreds

VANCOUVER (CP) — Deril Warren, leader of British Columbia's Progressive Conservatives, said today he wants to continue as party leader and work toward a political realignment in the province to bring together the free enterprise vote behind one party.

"I just don't think this province can afford four political parties and in any way hope to maximize the expression of majority opinion or near-majority opinion to parties at the polls," he said.

"I think indeed three parties is probably too many, but certainly four."

He said he will go to Victoria for the next session of the legislature, taking in proceedings from the visitors' gallery. Warren said Social Credit, in his mind, "is firstly over as a provincial political force. I think there will still be some squirming, but I think, in effect, it is over."

He said a party "that is dying and is not a federal party, I think, should consider what its future direction is going to be."

Israel 'Still' Seeks Peace

Times News Services

The Palestinian terrorist murders at the Munich Olympics "will not change Israel's principles for peace" in the Middle East, Premier Golda Meir said today.

At the same time she denied Munich reports that the abortive rescue mission of the terrorists' hostages had been made after consultation with Israeli officials.

In Tripoli, Libya, the bodies of the five guerrillas killed in Munich were buried today as "martyrs and heroes," according to Radio Libya.

Mrs. Meir told the Knesset parliament — during a debate on the Munich massacre — "Arab terror will not distort our humanitarian character or our pursuit of peace."

But the 74-year-old Israeli leader again criticized Arab governments for supporting terrorist movements, exemplified only Jordan which condemned the Munich slaughter.

Her assurance that Israel is still prepared to seek a peaceful solution in the Mideast came four days after Foreign Minister Abba Eban said peace efforts would be shelved until the world acts to stamp out terrorist organizations.

Mrs. Meir disclosed that Israel sent a senior security official to Munich while Arab terrorists were still holding the hostages. But the official was not consulted by West German authorities on the unsuccessful rescue plan.

Mrs. Meir kept the security man's identity secret, but it was not Defence Minister Moshe Dayan. Some press reports said Dayan flew to Germany during the Olympic crisis, but the general stayed in Israel.

Opening the Knesset debate, Mrs. Meir also disclosed:

Before and during the Olympics, Israeli security experts suggested increased safety measures to Olympic and German officials. She did not say what the response was.

No Israeli "police, army or snipers" were in Munich, and no Israeli authority was asked to negotiate with the terrorists, nor to approve or disapprove the German plan of action.

Israel promised Germany it would "respond with understanding" if the terrorists were given safe conduct in exchange for the hostages.

Meanwhile, the Black September organization to which the terrorists belonged, released their will, made a few hours before the attack on the Israeli quarters in the Olympic Village.

The commandos said they did not want to kill innocent people but would "do everything" for the "sake of the persecuted."

They apologized for interrupting the Games, said they had nothing against the German people and apologized to the world's youth taking part in the Olympics.

L.I.P. Will Stay ...If

MONTREAL (CP) — If the Liberals are returned to power in the Oct. 30 election, the federal Local Initiatives Program will be made permanent by Dec. 1, Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey said Monday.

He made the statement at a Liberal nominating convention in the Montreal riding of St. Henri.

The federal job incentive program was brought in on a temporary basis to fight unemployment last winter.

Mackasey criticized separatists in Quebec, and said they are responsible for the lower standard of living in parts of Quebec such as the St. Henri area of Montreal.

Those who would destroy Canada by causing Quebec's separation were mortgaging people's future and the future of Montreal, he told the meeting.

"Every time a large corporation moves its head office out of Quebec, jobs are lost," Mackasey said.

"These firms aren't moving out of Canada as a whole, they're moving out of Quebec," he said.

The Liberal member for St. Henri, Gerard Loiselle, was renominated by acclamation at the meeting.

New House Financing Rules Fine for Upper Classes

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Revisions to National Housing Act financing regulations are being viewed as beneficial to families wanting to buy a house, but may not be as helpful to lower income families as to the upper middle class.

The amendments were announced Monday in Ottawa. For new single-family homes, the maximum mortgage loan goes from $25,000 to $30,000 and to a straight 95 per cent of appraised value.

For existing homes, the maximum mortgage loan goes from the present $18,000 to $23,000.

The effect, says Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., is that downpayments will be reduced for people wishing to buy new or existing homes.

But CMHC's assistant manager in Victoria, Michael Young, believes that lower income families will not be helped much, at least as far as new homes are concerned.

Asked to comment on the effect the NHA changes will have on lower income families, Young said:

"I can't say too much about it other than that it is obviously not going to help lower income people very much. They just can't afford the payments on a $25,000 mortgage, let alone a $30,000 one," he said.

A family with an annual income of $7,000, he said, can usually afford nothing more than a $15,000 or $16,000 mortgage because of the payments involved.

"And $15,000 or $16,000 is a helluva long way from $30,000."

Young said companies dealing in mortgages can expect increased business as a result of the changes. CMHC, he said, which does not loan money directly but assures loans, will be busier with appraisals and adjustments.

"We're sure the changes

Victoria Times

TUESDAY, SEPT. 12, 1972

will be a help to people," Young said. "But I don't think they will be the cure to any great social ills or anything."

B. J. Leduc, manager of M. P. Teller Securities Ltd.,

said the probable effect of the NHA changes is that the market value of homes will go up.

He said that of the $5,000 increase in maximum mortgage loans, as much as $1,000 or $1,300 will be eaten up by home price increases.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see the vendor seeking another $1,000 on top of the price he's asking now," Leduc said.

But he said the changes will make it easier for low and middle income families to purchase their own homes.

"If you're looking at an average price of, say, $27,000 for a home, the old limit of $18,000 left too much of a down payment," he said.

"This will help some of them."

Jack Davidson, manager of Canadian Acceptance Corporation Ltd., said lower income families will not just use the NHA changes to begin looking at more expensive housing requirements.

He said they will continue to seek the type of housing they always have, in the $18,000 to $25,000 level, and should have an easier time financing their purchase.

Davidson said the NHA changes are certain to affect mortgage business but was not willing to speculate on the effect on home prices in the city.

Besides the increased maximum levels for new and existing home mortgages, there were other significant changes to the NHA announced.

On new single-family dwellings, the amount of income that can be used to cover mortgage and property tax payments has been increased to 30 per cent from the former 27 per cent. Also, in calculating income, both the husband's and the wife's income will be counted, instead of the former practice of taking the borrower's earnings plus 50 per cent of the spouse's.

The 95 per cent of appraised value level now applies to the full value of the home. Formerly, the loans were based on 95 per cent of the first $20,000 value and 80 per cent of the remainder.

Ottawa Sends UIC Brass

Top officials of the Unemployment Insurance Commission flew from Ottawa to Vancouver Saturday to attempt to head off a dispute with International Woodworkers of America members protesting delays and disqualifications in benefits.

UIC chairman Guy Cousineau and two commissioners met five officials of the IWA—regional second vice-president Wyman Trineer and Bill Hawkes of Port Alberni, Ed Linder of Duncan, Ben Thompson of the loggers' local and Hector Poirier of Vancouver.

Last week, several hundred members of the Port Alberni local of the IWA decided to march to Victoria to protest benefit delays and other Island IWA locals added their members would join in.

Now, however, Hawkes said any march would be held in abeyance. He said no date had been set for the march, although it was expected to be this week.

Hawkes said the UIC chiefs decided that there has been a substantial resumption of work in the industry following this summer's strike and fallers dispute and disqualification claims will end Sept. 3.

In addition, the UIC will review all further cases to determine retroactivity, he said.

"This is an improvement but we are not exactly jumping up and down with joy over it," he said.

Hawkes added that the UIC decision means no disqualifications after Sept. 3 for the reasons that there has not been a full resumption of work, together with the promised review.

Grades Go

Say farewell to Grades 9, 10, 11 and 12. They are not going to be around much longer.

The Greater Victoria school board took the first step at a meeting of its education committee Monday night towards eliminating grade distinctions above Grade 9.

The committee recommended to next Monday's board meeting that the action be taken and that students in high school be referred to in a different manner.

If the motion passes, and it is likely to since no serious objection was raised at the committee meeting, students now in Grade 9 will be referred to as being in "first year" of high school, students now in Grade 10 in "second year" and so on.

Trustee Dr. Phillip Ney made the suggestion, saying the grade distinction system is "quite arbitrary" and doesn't allow for students who may be halfway between two established grades.

Ney said the courses students take should be numbered according to their order, but that students should not have to be numbered in that manner.

Trustee Carron Jameson said there still will remain a definite distinction between the oldest high school students and the youngest elementary students regardless of the terms used to describe them.

"Yes, but it is an artificial distinction," said Ney, a child psychiatrist.

"Oh, I don't know. It's a matter of about four feet," quipped Jameson.

A word of caution came from district director of instruction Dr. John Wiens, who said the most hostile reaction to the change in terminology is likely to come from parents. "It just can't be done all that easily," he said.

Mud Blamed on Builders

A city hall complaint to contractors over the problem of dirty, cluttered streets seems to have been misdirected in more ways than one, says Ed Phillips, manager of the Construction Association of Victoria.

The letter in question was sent last Friday by city engineer James Garnett, but still hasn't arrived because it was addressed to the association's former offices in Bastion Square.

Aside from the fact the letter was wrongly addressed, however, Phillips said today he can't understand why it should have been sent to his association at all.

DEVELOPING TREND
In the letter, Garnett says in recent years there has been "a gradually developing trend for contractors to take what appears to be a less responsible attitude" towards keeping streets clean and tidy when they are engaged on building contracts.

So many complaints have been reaching city hall, Garnett says, that he has been asked to see how existing regulations can be enforced or, failing this, to suggest tighter restrictions.

"It is my recommendation that the matter be drawn to the attention of contractors through your organization, and it is anticipated that they will respond to avoid the frequently dirty and littered streets adjacent to building sites."

Phillips, who was unaware of the complaint until approached by the Times, said it appears to be aimed at contractors in the residential field, whereas the 200 members of the Construction Association are primarily engaged in the public sector on such projects as schools, universities and hospitals.

These projects were usually in the "larger dollars" range.

STANFIELD TO VISIT

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield will visit Victoria next Monday, Michael Manning, president of the Victoria Progressive Conservative Association, said today.

Plans have not been completed, but Manning said Monday the national Conservative leader will be arriving at the Empress Hotel, sometime early Monday morning.

Stanfield will spend one day touring the two federal constituencies in Victoria and Esquimalt-Saanich.

the sites in question boarded around and "scrupulous" conditions enforced to avoid traffic obstruction, health hazards or any other form of nuisance, Phillips said.

Saying he would like some clarification from city hall as to where the problem really lies, Phillips admitted he has seen residential developments where unsatisfactory conditions exist.

On some multiple-dwelling sites there is a "conglomeration" of trucks blocking both sides of the road and the contractors, "seem to wander all over the street with materials, trucks and servicing equipment blocking all entrances and exits," he said.

"I would agree that this is a problem and that council has to clear it up."

Poll Ruled Out For Highrise

A large apartment building, Beckley Manor at 548 Dallas Rd., will be without a polling station in the federal election Oct. 30.

In the past two elections, the federal in 1968 then the provincial on Aug. 30, tenants of the waterfront highrise had only to walk a few steps and take the elevator to their polling station.

After bitter complaints from tenants about building security, apartment manager Walter Thorne has refused Victoria returning officer David Wilson permission to put a polling station in the building.

Since appointed returning officer in 1967, Wilson says he has tried to place polling stations in the most convenient places.

"The election act states that polling stations must have open doors and that they be accessible not only to polling staff who are working there but to candidates and scrutineers," Wilson said.

Beckley Manor, like many new apartments, has a controlled entrance, and Thorne said, "A lot of our tenants are nervous that anybody can drift in and things might be stolen."

Thorne admits nothing has happened in the past two elections but he said, "We don't want anything to happen, so I've told the returning officer no polling station in Beckley Manor."

Wilson said the decision by Thorne will pose a problem.

"It will probably mean the people in that apartment will have to go a considerable distance to a polling place."

GARBAGE UP TO HERE AND FED UP!

A man who claimed his garbage had been missed for two weeks threatened Monday night to deliver it to the steps of Saanich municipal hall this morning.

But he didn't have to act on his threat: Saanich garbage department made a special trip to pick up the load at 10 a.m., noting that it exceeded the maximum weight permitted.

Roland Stroub, 438 Ker, rose to his feet midway through a meeting of council's public works committee and asked whether Mayor Curtis was present, or if any aldermen were there.

He took the committee by surprise by relating his garbage collection problem, aggravated by the recent holiday weekend. There was no collection on Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 4, he said.

"If my garbage is not picked up by 11 a.m. tomorrow morning, I'll be on the sidewalk outside the hall," he said as chairman Ald. William Campbell tried to tell him the committee could not hear the matter.

"That's fine: you can do what you like with it," Campbell said, explaining that he should have taken the problem up with the appropriate municipal department.

"They'll pick it up," Stroub complained. Neatly bundled and tied bags of garbage left on top of garbage cans were not handled by the collection crew Monday morning which left a note on top saying: "Cans overloaded."

"What do they expect with two weeks without a pickup?" Stroub asked.

DRUGS TO CITIZENS

A citizen's committee will likely be established by the Greater Victoria school board to determine what the public wants in the way of warning its children on the dangers of drug abuse.

The committee, another of a series which is designed to get community feedback on matters affecting the school board and the general public, was suggested to the board by Robert Mitchell, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers Association.

Mitchell told the school board's education committee Monday night that he is not convinced that the Social Credit government's method of campaigning against drug abuse was a successful one. "I don't believe in the scare campaign," he said, adding that the problem might be more effectively handled in family-type discussions.

He said a citizens' committee, one of which has already studied the problem of corporal punishment in the schools, might bring out the community's wishes best. "We must have an accurate reflection of what the society and the community want," he said.

Most of the trustees agreed and it was recommended by the committee to take the necessary action at next Monday's regular board meeting.

$2,000 Down 'Almost Silly'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Changes in the National Housing Act permitting a lower down payment on new homes sound good on the surface but still make home-buying an expensive proposition, says Victoria Real Estate Board manager John Hicks.

He said the new NHA plan permitting the purchase of a $32,000 house with $2,000 down is "almost silly."

He said: "Who with $2,000 could afford to purchase a $32,000 house? Besides the cost of the house, the purchaser needs money for furniture. That could run between $4,000 and $5,000."

"If a person can only afford $2,000 down payment I don't think he can afford a $32,000 house."

Hicks said the resulting $30,000 mortgage at the current Victoria rate of 9 1/2 per cent over 30 years would cost the purchaser $283 per month, including taxes.

By the old 25 per cent guideline, the person would have to be earning more than $1,130 per month to be able to afford the new NHA deal.

Even amortizing the mortgage over the maximum 40 years would not reduce the payments low enough, he said. Monthly payments would still be above $230 per month.

"These changes sound great on the surface but when you get down to the arithmetic you discover that very few people will be able to afford new houses at these rates."

"It just makes it easier for those who could afford it anyway," he said.

Under the new regulations, persons will be able to spend up to 30 per cent of their monthly income on mortgage payments including taxes, although 25 per cent has long been considered a practical maximum in terms of housing debt for the average person.

In calculating income, the full earnings of husband and wife now may be counted. In the past only 50 per cent of the income of the spouse could be considered under terms of NHA loans.

Loans have been set at 95 per cent of appraised value instead of 95 per cent of the appraised value on the first $20,000 plus 80 per cent on the remaining amount.

These rules apply to new houses only.

Where existing homes are being bought, the maximum loan has been increased to $23,000 from $18,000 and loans are based upon 95 per cent of appraised value.

Hicks said the interest rate of 8 per cent to 9 1/2 per cent is the biggest obstacle to home buying.

He said the federal government, if it was serious about assisting home purchases, should subsidize the interest rate to bring it down to about six per cent.

A six per cent mortgage of $30,000 amortized over 25 years would mean payments of $191.96 per month, he said.

"That is getting closer to the range where the average person can afford to buy a home. Interest rates make all the difference in working out monthly payments."

RESIDENTS IRKED BY SMOKE SCREEN

The Millstream landfill has inspired more anger among residents in the Langford-Thetis Lake area.

A Langford fire department official said today smoke from the landfill began filling the streets in the surrounding area about 11 p.m. Monday.

Today the department has received numerous complaints from the Thetis Lake subdivision and the buildings across the street from the fire hall were barely visible.

The fire department has no control over the smoldering garbage.

"The smoke is coming up through 40 or 50 feet of garbage," the spokesman said.

He said firemen covered the fire, which has been burning for two weeks, with a thousand gallons of water, but it was "about as effective as dumping a one gallon bucket in the middle of Thetis Lake."

Dog Owners Break Tent Bylaw

Competitors in the three-day dog show in Sidney are creating what the building inspector describes as a "deteriorating situation" by camping on Sanscha grounds.

About 450 dogs have been entered in the Shoreline Kennel Club Show, which opened Sunday and the grounds around Sanscha exhibition hall are filled with the owners' tents, campers and trailers.

Building inspector Hans Schneider pointed out in a report to council Monday the grounds are being used for transient camping facilities contrary to municipal bylaw.

There are no sewer or water hookups available for trailers and Sanscha restroom facilities are locked at night.

The report added that Sidney had turned away several trailer clubs and caravans which have applied for permission to camp locally.

Council instructed the municipal clerk to prepare legislation to control transient camping and will also investigate the cost of sanitary dumping facilities for self-contained trailers.

A man who prevented a contractor's crew from completing demolition work on an old building in James Bay Monday will plead in court Sept. 19 on a charge of assault by trespass.

Thirty-year-old Bob Batty was arrested by Victoria city police after a bulldozer was kept from demolishing the old house by a man who jumped on to the building's roof.

Batty was released on his own recognizance and will seek legal aid before making his plea in court.

The house is located at 447 Kingston, about two blocks from the legislative buildings.

Lindholm, Bruch in Race

Louis Lindholm, 47-year-old Victoria lawyer, announced today he will seek nomination as Liberal candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich for the federal election Oct. 30.

Nominating meeting will be held Friday at Mt. View High School at 8 p.m.

Lindholm, a resident of North Saanich, ran for the Liberals provincially in 1969 in Saanich and the Islands. He ran third behind the Social Credit's John Tisdalle and runner-up Donald Johannesen, New Democratic candidate.

Tisdalle, who was defeated in his bid for nomination for the Aug. 30 provincial election announced Monday he will be seeking nomination with the federal Social Credit party in Esquimalt-Saanich.

Lindholm is a native of Chilliwack, but has resided in the Victoria area since 1953.
